VOL. XXI.....NO. 6331. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JANUARY 4, 1872. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

WORK OF THE LEGISLATURE.

The Reform Movement Already Commenced.

A Demand Made for Tweed's Expulsion from the Senate.

Three Memorials Presented in Relation to His Case.

The November Grand Jury to be Continued and Its Work Legalized.

The Corporation Attorney and Fields to be Removed from Office.

Other Sweeping Measures to be Soon Introduced.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Jan. 3, 1872.

Neither house remained in session over an hour today, and the business was mainly confined to the introduction of bills relating to New-York City. In the Assembly Col. HAWKINS introduced his bill, previously noticed, for confirming the acts of the November Grand Jury in the Court of Sessions, and authorizing the extension of their term. He also moved a correction of the journal of yesterday's proceedings relative to the memorial presented by him in the case of TOM FIELDS. He said the memorial was not for a contest of FIELDS' seat as entered on the journal, but for his expulsion from the Assembly. FIELDS objected to any correction of the journal that represented the memorial as differing from what was announced to the House when it was presented. He, however, consented to allow the words "for contesting the seat" of Mr. FIELDS to be stricken out, leaving the record on the journal as a "memorial from the electors of the Nineteenth District of New-York."

Mr. TWOMBLY introduced a bill for the removal of Corporation Counsel O'GORMAN, Park Commissioner FIELDS and others from office, and giving the appointment of these officials to Controller GREEN pending the adoption of a new charter for New-York. In the bill as originally drawn the Commissioner of Public Works was also included, but the Tammany Republicans have succeeded in getting VAN NORT's name struck out, Mr. TILDEN consenting to the amendment. A motion will be made to-morrow to reinsert the name of VAN NORT among the officials to be removed, and on this motion it is expected that the first move toward a combination between the Fusion and Tammany Republicans and Democrats will be made.

Mr. MACKAY introduced a bill to compel the examination before committing Magistrates of persons arrested for crime within twenty-four hours after the arrest, and the examination to be concluded within thirty days. If an examination is waived by the prisoner, the Magistrate must immediately send the papers to the District-Attorney's office, in default of which he is subject to imprisonment and fine, one or both.

Mr. J. D. BROWN introduced a concurrent resolution for an amendment of the Constitution of the State, forbidding the appropriation of public money for any sectarian purpose whatever, either by the State or by any town or municipality. It is similar to the amendment offered last Winter and the year before by Senator WOODIN.

The Speaker announced the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, as follows: STRAHAN, of Orange, Chairman; TWOMBLY of New-York, MARCY of Suffolk, SPRINGSTED of Albany, BURNS of Onondaga, D. B. HILL of Chemung and MOSELEY of Kings. There is a poetic justice in the making up of this Committee. TWOMBLY and SPRINGSTED have both been contestants for seats under Democratic rule, and both were denied even the semblance of justice—being refused a hearing until the latter part of the session, and then having their cases decided contrary to the evidence. D. B. HILL was on the Committee last year which refused TWOMBLY a seat, in face of the gross fraud by which he was counted out, though he now says that he never signed the majority report of the Committee, and that his signature was forged.

The Assembly this morning passed a resolution by a large majority to adjourn from to-morrow till Tuesday morning next, but the Senate refused to concur, and an adjournment will now be impossible until Friday. Meantime there can be very little business done in the Assembly, as the Committees will not be announced until next week. As most of the members came here expecting that the old custom of adjourning over for a week after the organization would prevail this year, they are not equipped for a permanent stay here, and are anxious to leave. Were it not for the contest that is to come up to-morrow over the bill to remove the New-York officials, it is doubtful whether a quorum of members could be found in Albany after to-night.

It may be interesting to old members of the Assembly to learn that the drawing of lots for seats this year was an honest transaction, and not a farce or a fraud, as it has been for years past. Neither members had an equal chance for the good seats with old ones, and the "talkers" were not favored at the expense of those less addicted to gab. By consent of the House, Mr. ALVORD was allowed to retain the same seat he has always occupied in the Assembly, while Mr. OSGOOD of Troy, Mr. SPRINGSTED of Albany, and one or two others, were permitted to have the first selections on account of deafness or other physical inferiority. HUSTED loses his old seat, but has one in the same row further to the left. TOM FIELDS is crowded into a middle seat on the left of the main aisle, third row from the front. JACOBS gets his old seat, and MOSELEY the one back of him, formerly occupied by LITTLEJOHN. TILDEN is in front of JACOBS. HAWKINS, JUDD and one or two other prominent members have located in "Sleepy Hollow," which bids fair to be as wide-awake this session as any part of the House.

THE SENATE.

The intention of the Senate to do away with the obnoxious legislation of the past two years was illustrated this morning in a very emphatic manner. Under the authority of Mr. WARNER, of Erie, the Tweed of Buffalo, there was passed last year an amendment to the city charter that practically placed in the hands of an irresponsible power the entire government of the city. Yesterday Senator LEWIS introduced a bill to repeal that act, and this morning it came up on its passage. While the bill was being read through by the Clerk, Senator HARDENBURGH arose and objected to the hurried manner of putting through so important a bill, but Senator LEWIS at once replied that the bill merely gave to the City of Buffalo a City Government of which the Legislature of last Winter had deprived it.

The resolution rescinding the action of the Legislature of 1870, against the Fifteenth Amendment of the Constitution, was passed by a vote lacking unanimity by only two votes. Senator HARDENBURGH concluded, after a brief protest against reviving what he considered a dead issue, to vote against the resolution.

This morning Senator BERGMANN introduced the petition of O'DONOVAN ROSSA praying that he be awarded the seat now held by W. M. TWEED; the memorial of the electors of the Fourth District praying for the expulsion of Mr. TWEED from the Senate; also a memorial from the citizens of the Fourth District asking that the election be declared null and void and that a new election be ordered. To this last paper was appended the complaint in the case of The People vs. TWEED and others, with the various schedules in which has appeared the findings of the Committee of Seventy. S.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 3—Evening.—Senator WOODIN, who was empowered by the Republican caucus held last evening to make up the standing committees of the Senate, will probably be prepared to announce the committees, or at least the Republican members thereof, to-morrow. The Democrats are entitled, by custom, to one man on each committee, and Mr. WOODIN offered to let Lieut.-Gov. BRACK select the names. He, however, declines the honor, and the Republicans have concluded to leave the task of selecting the Democratic committeeman to the Democratic Senators themselves. Some of them express a willingness to assume the duty, but do not like to act until the arrival of Mr. MURPHY, of Brooklyn, the oldest member of the Senate, who is now detained at home by sickness. If the Democrats decline to select their men after he arrives, they will be permitted to go unrepresented on the committees. The trouble appears to be about TWEED, neither party wishing to take the responsibility of putting him on or keeping him off the committees. It is currently reported that the following named Senators will be assigned to the chairmanships of the leading committees: Municipal Affairs, PALMER, of Dutchess; Railroads, MADDEN, of Orange and Sullivan; Finance, D. P. WOOD, of Onondaga; Canals, LEWIS, of Erie; Judiciary, JAS. WOOD, of Livingston.

THE FOURTH JUDICIAL QUESTION.

According to the mutual arrangement, the question as to the time of Judge SAMUEL W. JACKSON, appointed by the Governor, or Judge JOSIAH PORTER, elected by the people, to the Judeship of the Fourth Judicial District, was argued before the General Term of the Supreme Court, and decided by that tribunal today in favor of Judge PORTER. The counsel of Judge JACKSON, as was expected, will carry the case to the Court of Appeals, which meets on the 12th inst., and its final decision will be speedily pronounced.

THE AUDITOR'S REPORT.

The report of the Auditor of the Canal Department shows that the surplus revenues of the canals for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1871, were $281,538 68. This, however, includes a part of the navigation season of 1870. The net receipts of the two fiscal years compare as follows:

1870	$225,314 21
1871	281,538 68

The total outstanding canal debt is $11,995,420. On the 30th of September, 1871, the sinking fund, under section 5, of article 7, of the Constitution, was overdrawn $236,760 65 in payment of the interest on the debt. This deficiency, together with a portion of the enlargement debt, amounting to $1,562,900, which becomes due on the 1st of July next, must be provided for. The Auditor thinks that, although there have been deficiencies during the past two years, the requirements of the Constitution may be met with a wise management of the canals, even upon the plan of reduced tolls. He urges a more economical administration, and especially a closer adherence to the proper limits of ordinary repairs. The introduction of some instrumentality which shall reduce the time of the trips, whether it be steam or some other force, he urges without making any specific suggestion.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS.

SENATE.—ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 3.

Mr. WOODIN introduced a bill changing the name of the Mutual Protection Life Assurance Society and increasing the capital.

On motion of Mr. BOWEN, the Clerk was directed to make the usual postal contract for the Senate.

The Senate then went into Executive session, and after some time spent therein the doors were opened.

The Senate then went into Committee on the bill to amend the Charter of the City of Buffalo, and repealing the act passed last Winter. The bill was gone through with, and ordered to a third reading.

The Assembly resolution to adjourn from to-morrow till Tuesday next was laid over.

Mr. MERRIGOT presented the memorial of O'DONOVAN ROSSA claiming a seat from the Fourth District; also of electors of the same District, praying for the expulsion of Senator TWEED, and calling for a new election.

The memorial declares that he received a majority of the votes in the Fourth Senate District, if legally counted; that a large number counted for TWEED were cast by aliens, naturalized, etc., who voted each several times; that of legal votes votes were cast in that way; that the registration was illegal; that on the day of the election ROSSA's tickets were destroyed; that the inspectors of election were men of no character or standing; that the canvass was a mere pretense; that the result, as declared by the canvassers, was a fraud; that upwards of 3,000 votes allowed to TWEED should have been allowed to ROSSA; that, therefore, the petitioner asks an investigation into these charges. The memorial was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. WOODIN called up the resolution ratifying the adoption of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Mr. HARDENBURGH asked to be excused from voting, as it had been adopted long ago. He was not excused. The resolution was adopted by 27 to 1.

Mr. WOODIN called up the Assembly resolution for a recess, and moved to amend so as to adjourn till Tuesday evening. Carried.

Mr. BENEDICT moved to adjourn from Friday, instead of Thursday.

Mr. D. P. WOOD remarked that at the commencement it was necessary to take a recess, to enable the Speaker to form his Committees.

Mr. BENEDICT's motion was negatived, and, as amended, the resolution was adopted.

The Senate then adjourned till to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

ASSEMBLY.

Mr. HAWKINS proposed a correction of the journal, so as to state that the memorial presented by him yesterday was for the expulsion of Mr. FIELDS, and not to contest his seat.

Mr. FIELDS said the journal should be the correct record of the proceedings of the House. When presented it was stated that the memorial was to contest the seat.

The Chair read the indorsement on the memorial, which was found to be: "Contest seat THOS. C. FIELDS."

Mr. FIELDS said he had no objection to having the indorsement read simply: "Memorial of the Electors of the Nineteenth District, New-York."

This was agreed to.

Mr. MACKAY introduced a bill providing that all persons charged with crime shall immediately be brought before a committing Magistrate, and an examination be had within twenty-four hours thereafter; such an examination shall not be adjourned for a longer time than three days. The design of the above bill is to abolish the present system existing in New-York with reference to rouges.

Mr. MACKAY introduced another bill providing that all indictments found against parties for criminal offences shall be tried within two years after such finding, provided the parties reside in the State continuously for that time. The District Attorney must present before the Grand Jury, during the sitting, every complaint made to him, either by the magistrate, the grand jury, and thereafter, within three days after the parties charged are confined to any jail.

TRIPLE MURDER.

A Terrible Tragedy at Windsor Locks, Conn.—A Man and Two Women Killed.

HARTFORD, Jan. 3.—The triple murder at Windsor Locks on Tuesday, briefly reported last night, proves to have been a most horrible affair. The victims were TIMOTHY BULLINGS and his wife and JULIA HAYS, a young woman and inmate of his house. The house has had a bad reputation for years. A man who visited there was found dead from the effects of drugs. BULLINGS and his wife were arrested, but nothing could be found against them. Two peddlers first discovered that there had been a tragedy there yesterday, and told a workman in the fields who went to the house, but was so horror-stricken that he did not inform the authorities of the village until evening. On visiting the house, the bodies of BULLINGS and the two women were found covered with wounds from the butt of a gun. An attempt had been made to fire the house. The peddlers say they saw two men come from the house across the fields as they approached. A young man named GEORGE GRANGER, of Suffield, has been arrested on suspicion. He was absent from home for a couple of days preceding the murder, and is known to have visited the house. This morning he borrowed a suit of clothes of another person, and left his home. He was one of a party of three men who were carried to the house Monday, and were left there. Several others have been arrested on suspicion, but discharged. EDWARD LOOMIS and CHARLES DAY, of Windsor Locks, the latter a butcher, are also under arrest. The country is being scoured to find those who went to the house with GRANGER. Three hundred dollars reward for the arrest of the murderers is offered by the town authorities.

Message of the Governor of Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 3.—Gov. GEARY's message to the Legislature represents the total debt at nearly twenty-nine millions. Deducting the Sinking Fund and cash in the Treasury, the balance unprovided for is $28,100,000. The amount paid off during the last five years averages $1,744,778 67 yearly. He makes a statement of the present condition of the claims against the General Government, and the commissions dedicated by EVARTS, who collected the amount paid, but says nothing relative to the suit now pending against EVARTS. He calls attention to the necessity of making vaccination compulsory; recommends additional legislation to prevent mining accidents; the removal of the Quarantine from the present location, and the establishment of a joint quarantine for Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania. He alludes to the decision of Judge STRONG, that the militia cannot be fired upon by the State, and points out the danger of the loss of the right to bear arms. The Report has not yet arrived.

THE ROCHESTER RIOT.

Intense Excitement Still Existing in the City.

The Citizens Manifesting Their Animosity to the Military.

Several of the Soldiers Maltreated by the Mob—Precautions Taken to Prevent Another Outbreak—Howitzers Placed in the Streets.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 3.—From 8 o'clock until 11 o'clock this morning the city was comparatively quiet. Four companies of the Fifty-fourth Regiment are guarding the jail and its approaches, and loaded cannon are placed so as to command the bridges. At 11 o'clock this forenoon quite a crowd assembled, and there is a good deal of hooting of the military, but no riot has been commenced. At 11½ o'clock some one placed on a canal-boat in the city of Court-street a flag on which were the words, "Avenge your Brothers." Brig.-Gen. CLARKE tore it down, and the crowd rushed upon him, and for a short time he was in peril. Just was released, and firearms were handed to him by friends. The sheriff has ordered out the remaining six companies of the Fifty-fourth Regiment, and they are now assembling at the arsenal. It is feared there will be a more trouble this afternoon and evening. The authorities are determined to defend the jail, yet they wish the negro HOWARD well out of it. Further particulars of the shooting last evening show that the soldiers were pelted by the mob with brickbats and stones, and several of them injured. The order to charge was given, and some of the mob fired instead. There is considerable of a crowd about the jail, but the heavy rain seems to check the excitement. No violence has been committed since noon. Preparations are being made to meet any emergency this evening. The Police are massed at Head-quarters, ready to move to any point. The negro HOWARD has been indicted.

Four P. M.—The Police in a body have just made a charge on the mob gathered in the vicinity of the jail, and are driving them through the streets in every direction. The greatest crowds are now in Buffalo-street, at the intersection of State. Two veteran military companies—the old Thirteenth, One Hundred and Eighth Ryan Zouaves, and One Hundred and Twentieth—have been sworn in as special policemen, and are now reporting at Police Head-quarters, which place they will guard, and the prisoners who may be captured by the regular Police. Several policemen who charged out of the lines this afternoon were knocked down by ruffians. It was thought that HOWARD, the negro, would be taken into Court this afternoon, but the Judges of the Over and Terminer will not convene until it is determined whether HOWARD's victim will recover or not. Judge E. DARWIN SMITH and and County Judge FULLER have directed the sheriff not to take HOWARD from the jail at present, and to protect the public property and preserve the public peace at all hazards. The howitzers have been removed to positions where they will command Exchange-street and the approaches from the east side of the river more effectually.

Eight P. M.—At this hour comparative quiet reigns in the guarded district. It is now thought there will not be any trouble during the night. In Exchange-street, from Buffalo-street, people are not permitted to stop and talk; they are ordered to walk on.

Detailed Account of the Action of the Military on Tuesday Night—They Charge Upon the Mob, then Fire, and Wound Seven Persons, Four Mortally.

In its account of the disturbances the Rochester Democrat of yesterday morning thus describes the events of Tuesday evening, including the firing of the military upon the mob:

At 6 o'clock the police and deputy sheriffs who had up to this time guarded the approaches to the jail were relieved by the militia. Sheriff CARTRELL had made a requisition on Brig.-Gen. CLARK for one or more companies of the Fifty-fourth Regiment, and Company G, Capt. LAUER, and company D, Capt. SCHWARTZ, were detailed for duty. In the afternoon companies E, S and A were ordered out and reached the scene. A guard was stationed at the eastern extremity of Court-street bridge, preventing any approach to the jail from that direction. At that point, however, the crowd was small, and no demonstration was made. On the west side of the river the militia occupied the bridge over the race, the only other avenue of approach. The bridge, the lumber yard, and the lane leading to the jail, were patrolled, and no one allowed to pass without the countersign. The sheriff had left the disposal of the militia in the Colonel's command, who was in command during the night. Capt. LAUER's company occupied the end of the bridge nearest the mob. For a long time nothing more serious occurred than shouting, and most of this was done by a parcel of boys who were nearest the bridge. Cries of "Give us the negro," "Hang the villain," were freely made. About 8 o'clock the crowd began to turn their attention more directly to the militia, and the troops were taunted with various epithets. The abuse came principally, so far as our reporter could gather from the outer edge of the crowd. As the crowd grew bolder, and finally several stones were thrown, and a number of men belonging to companies C and D were struck. The militia became greatly excited, and repeatedly asked their officers to be allowed to charge. Capt. LAUER says he had his men to hold their position, but in one case he did. In the meantime several brickbats were hurled by the crowd. One of the Sheriff's deputies was hit in the face, and a number of soldiers received hurts of a trifling character. No serious injuries were received by any one with the exception of one of the guards on the bridge, who received a serious cut on the head, being struck by a stone. During this time, also, some one in the crowd fired five shots from a revolver in succession. Whether these shots were aimed at the troops or not is unknown. One of the pavements on the lane leading to the jail showed that he heard of a bullet which passed, as he judged, some ten feet above his head. Some three or more shots were fired afterwards, none of them, however, taking effect. At 9½ o'clock our reporter passed through the crowd. Men, part of whom were only spectators, were standing all along Exchange-street from the swing bridge to points above Court-street. The crowd were standing on knees on Court-street and along the walks, and a number were perched on lumber piles in the open space running from the corner of Exchange-street to the bridge across the race. There were some females, but the majority were men, and are now distinct from the troops. The whole number of persons in the vicinity was about 1,500. None of the crowd were within twenty feet of the troops, and these immediately in front were boys. As our reporter passed through these, two of the soldiers leveled their guns in quick succession and fired over the crowd. This had no effect on the mob, who seemed emboldened as the troops with new vigor. As this time nothing was being thrown, nor were the rioters making anything but a wordy demonstration. We may remark that every cartridge was expended with thirty rounds of ball cartridge, as is usual when called out in an emergency. But the crowd supposed the soldiers were furnished with blank cartridges, and as the fears being intimidated by shot, maintained the same threatening language, and kept up a desultory fire of expletives and brickbats. The guard at the bridge were beginning to be pelted with brickbats, and whether or not the order to charge or direct a falling back came from the position, it was then, that Col. Wainwright, as we are informed, ordered Capt. LAUER with his Company to disperse the mob. The men advanced at a double quick, but finding the crowd did not yield, called for reinforcements, and Company D, Capt. SCHWARTZ, came up on a run, and formed on the right of the line. The mob slowly fell back, and at this instant a member of Company D discharged his musket.

FIRE AGAIN.

The first shot was immediately followed by a scattering volley from both companies. A lieutenant of company G states that the immediate order of the firing was a blow received by private FARMER, of Company D, who was struck by a brickbat on the head. The ball lodged in the after leg of his pantaloons. He says that discovered that [illegible] they were placed up by persons in the crowd and carried across the street. As near as we can learn the soldiers did not fire directly ahead, but aimed toward the edge of the crowd, and those shot fell near the posts and south corner of Exchange-street. After the firing the companies who had made the charge, some forty men in all, fell back to the bridge.

THE KILLED AND THE WOUNDED.

As far as ascertainable, seven persons in all were struck by the balls. Of these, three died in a few minutes, two are dangerously if not fatally wounded, and the rest more or less seriously. The first victim whom our reporter found was JOHN ESTHER, whose business as freight deliverer has made him known to the whole community. He fell at the south corner of Court and Exchange streets, and was carried across the street into Mrs. JOHNSON's saloon. The ball had entered the left breast just above the heart. As he was laid upon the floor the bullet fell from the wound, having penetrated through the body. He lived but a few moments. Mr. ESTER had walked to the brewhouse with two or three companions, simply as a spectator. He leaves a widow and seven children, ranging from one to fourteen years of age. His age was about forty-two years.

HENRY MEELAN was also shot down by the rapid fire of the militia. He was standing on Exchange-street, in front of WARFIELD & Co.'s stoveware, at the moment, or, as some assert, was passing that store on his way home from work, and therefore not at all involved in the riot. He was taken into HUGH DEVITT's saloon, where Dr. DARNWORTHY attended him. The bullet struck him in front, piercing the stomach. He died in a few minutes after removal to the saloon. He was a cabinet maker by trade, and a young man, twenty years of age. In the same saloon was also taken JOHN HILBERGH, shot through the calf of the right leg. He was attended by Dr. DARNWORTHY. He is a laborer, and about thirty-five years of age. He stated that he was walking along Exchange-street when shot, and had nothing to do with the riot. There is nothing to prevent his recovery.

LOUIS HAGE and ELIAS SWANSON were wounded and carried to Dr. ELY's office, on Fitzhugh-street, and cared for by Drs. W. S. ELY and W. W. ELY. HAGE was shot through the thigh, the bullet penetrating the limb. He was also struck in the left arm, near the elbow. His condition was extremely critical. The physicians declared that the arm would probably have to be amputated, and this, together with the wound in the thigh, will render his recovery doubtful. He was removed to the City Hospital. He is a young man, a laborer. ELIAS SWANSON was, as far as ascertained, not seriously hurt. He had evidently been in the crowd when the troops charged. Having received a bayonet wound in the back. He is a laborer, living at No. 160 Atkinson-street, and a young man of twenty.

JOHN NOLAN was shot down and removed by his friends to St. Mary's Hospital. Drs. CARNOLE and GARNY attended him. He was shot through the right lung and right arm. He is not expected to recover. He lives on Pinnacle-avenue. A COMMISSIONER of the Insane was as far as ascertained, the ball entered anterior to the right axilla, (arm-pit,) passing deep up and backward. The wound is severe, but not necessarily fatal. The injured man was attended by Dr. HOVEY, to whose office he was brought. The ball was not extracted. He is twenty years of age.

AFTER THE FIRING.

The greater part of the crowd now gathered around the place into which some of the dead and wounded had been carried, and bitter threats were made against the military. Adjt. BEGY happening to pass along the street soon after, his uniform was noticed and the infuriated crowd made a rush for him. He was fain to seek safety in flight, and ran through Exchange-street to the Clinton House. Some fifty or more of his pursuers waited before the hotel for a long time. He left the building by another way. All the Police were called together, by order of the Commissioners, and a detachment, under command of Capt. SHORTLIDGE, sent to the scene.

At 12½ o'clock some shots were again fired by the soldiers. About fifty men were standing at the corner of Court and Exchange streets, and as them the whole scene to have been directed. The crowd was not making any demonstrations, or menacing the soldiers in any shape.

We have not said by five near as may be a graphic account of the whole proceeding, and therefore are compelled to state that the grave charge of drunkenness is made against some of the soldiers who were engaged in the firing last night. The charge comes from a perfectly trustworthy source that a number of the participants were drunk, and that they got drunk probably the worse for liquor. Both Capts. LAUER and SWARTZ deny giving the order to fire. They state that they cautioned the men against it. Capt. LAUER furthermore states that when the firing began he stopped it as soon as possible, threw up three muskets with his sword, and took another away from one of his command.

Intense Excitement Caused by the Struggle Between the Two Branches of the Republican Party.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 3.—The Warmoth-Carter imbroglio is fast approaching a crisis. For three days the House of Representatives has been in a state of intense excitement, the Warmoth party struggling to oust Speaker CARTER from his seat, and nearly every member armed for a fight. The Senate has been without a quorum for three days. The majority will not recognize PINCHBACK as Lieutenant-Governor, and WARMOTH threatens to issue orders declaring seats of Senators vacant who will not attend the session of the Senate. He made overtures to the Democrats if they would help in his fight against the other wing of the party, he would give them anything they might ask. They rejected his offer unless he would consent to resign his office—such is the report. It is expected that to-morrow a bitter and bloody strife will occur in the House and perhaps the Senate. Great excitement prevails. Ex-Gov. J. B. WELLER had an apoplectic stroke today, and is dangerously ill.

Organization of the State Legislature—Preparations for the Governor's Inauguration—The Election Sermon.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—The complete organization of the State Legislature was effected today, and on Friday forenoon WASHBURN's inaugurations will take place. The friends of Hon. H. H. COOLIDGE succeeded in re-electing him President of the Senate, and by the union of the friends of Mr. TOWNE, of Pittsburg, and Mr. SANFORD, of Taunton, the election of the latter as Speaker of the House was secured. Mr. COOLIDGE had 23 of the 39 votes cast in the Senate, and Mr. SANFORD had 155 votes against 80 for Mr. CODDEWELL, of Yarmouth. The speech of Mr. COOLIDGE, on taking the chair in the Senate, was entirely an appeal for a short session, and the tone of Mr. SANFORD's was the same, with the addition of the existing facts of special legislation. Mr. GIFFORD was re-elected Clerk of the Senate, and Mr. ROBINSON WARRINGTON, of the House, received 126 against 16 for CHAS. H. TAYLOR, of Somerville, late Governor's Private Secretary, and a few for Mrs. MARY A. LIVERMORE, one of the editors of the Woman's Journal. Major MORRISSEY was re-elected Sergeant-at-Arms.

After the organization, the Legislature, with the Governor and his staff, the Cadets and State Company acting as escort, marched (as Legislatures have done for many a year) to view most down Beacon Hill to the old South Church to listen to the annual election sermon. The preacher on this occasion was Rev. ANDREW P. PEABODY, D. D., preacher to the Harvard University, and the sermon was an unusually bold and timely discourse. It was on the labor question, viewed from the stand-point of capital. His text was "Thou shalt not steal." He denounced the general war upon capital shown in the restless agitation of land, the excessive taxation, the growing jealousy of large estates, and the increasing desire to invade them and approach a more equal distribution of wealth. He found that the wrong results from the fact that the property of every community was under the control of a majority which hardly feels the burden, though it may hope to profit by the disbursement of the taxes.

The result of the elections to the two branches of the Legislature is considered as showing that the Railroad Ring (there are great Rings here as well as at Albany) is not all-powerful. S.

Connecticut Labor Reform Convention—Nominations Instead of Officers.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 3.—The Connecticut Labor Reform Convention nominated today, A. E. HARRISON, of New-Haven, for Governor; W. R. GOODNOW, of Hartford, for Lieutenant-Governor; E. M. GRAVES, of Hartford, for Secretary of State; JAMES CRAIG, of Middletown, for Treasurer, and T. M. LAMBERTON, of Bridgeport, for Comptroller. Only thirty delegates attended the Convention. A long platform was adopted similar to that of the National Convention in St. Louis in 1870.

Economical Collection of the Internal Revenue—Police Reports Concerning the District Government.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—A careful computation has been made of the percentage of cost of collecting the internal revenue, since it was first levied, to the total of gross collections for the same time, and it is found to be three and sixty-six one-hundredths per cent. This is a most gratifying showing, when it is considered that it is much below the cost of private collections, which is seldom less than five per cent.

An injudicious friend of the President in Rhode Island has sent him a Narragansett turkey for New Year, accompanied with the caution not to let his opponents become aware of the fact lest it give rise to another charge of corruption.

REPORTED EXTRAVAGANCE IN THE DISTRICT GOVERNMENT UNFOUNDED.

The Board of Public Works of this District have issued a statement which effectually explodes the silly reports started, that the new Government of this District had already run up a debt of $15,000,000. The total estimated cost of all of the work done and contracts entered into, most of which are yet either only partly completed or not begun, is $600,704 95. This includes the one-third which is assessable on property, leaving the actual expenditures of the Board on contracts already entered into at $653,190 95. This will include a sewerage system for the larger portion of the city, the filling of the canal, and the paving and improving of a large number of principal streets.

STIMULANTS AND NARCOTICS.

STIMULANTS AND NARCOTICS: THEIR MUTUAL RELATIONS; WITH SPECIAL RESEARCHES UPON THEIR ACTION. By FRANCIS E. ANSTIE, M. D., M. R. C. P. MACMILLAN & CO.

STIMULANTS AND NARCOTICS: MEDICALLY, PHILOSOPHICALLY AND MORALLY CONSIDERED. By C. M. BEARD, M. D. G. P. PUTNAM & SONS. [Many book notices.]

The popular, and also the scientific view, of most writers upon the action of stimulants is challenged with much eloquence and originality in the first of the books that we have mentioned. Most of the writers upon this subject have ascribed the action of stimulants to an exhilaration of a vital or "nervous" force, which exists somewhere in the human organism. They have agreed, also, in asserting that the stimulant action is followed by a corresponding recoil or depression. Such is the view of PEREIRA, G. B. WOOD, NELIGAN, and of other not less distinguished physiologists, and that part of the public which interests itself in the theory of stimulants, has concluded, pretty generally, that whatever advantages may result from the occasional use of stimulants, were counterbalanced, as a rule, by this inevitable "recoil."

Dr. ANSTIE undertakes, in the present volume, nothing less than an entire reconstruction of the theory and classification of stimulants, and, as a result, attacks many of the commonly-received notions regarding their use. His volume—less known in this country than it deserves to be, for it has not been reprinted in America—is the fullest discussion that the subject has received of late years at competent hands, and presents a large number of original experiments in support of the author's views. While we shall not feel under obligation to assent to all his views, we shall do our readers a service, we think, in laying before them the main conclusions which this author has reached respecting an inquiry which he has studied so carefully.

Dr. ANSTIE attacks the doctrine of the "recoil" which is said to follow after the use of stimulants. Is it meant, he asks, that this secondary depression goes so far as to place the vital energies at a lower level than that which they occupied when the stimulant was taken? Unless this be meant, the mere fact that subsequent depression occurs is valueless. And that this is not the case, is proved by the phenomenon of the "continuous stimulation" which is so frequently employed in the treatment of fevers. A first dose of the stimulant having been given, and having used up, if the theory of "recoil" be true, as much vital or nervous force as it can educe, depression sets in; but in order to prevent the development of this state the physician repeats the stimulant medicine, using up, according to this theory, fresh vital force. But this process may be repeated for days or even for weeks together, the patient recovering at last. If each successive dose had used up vital force, as is implied in the "recoil" theory, the patient, between the disease and the doctoring, would have died instead of getting well. The simple facts will surprise many of our readers. A fever patient often lies for days taking an entirely insufficient quantity of common food to create new force; perhaps taking no food at all. Yet finally the necessity for the stimulant medicine, which he has been constantly taking, has ceased, not by the patient's death, but by his having recovered his energy so far as to digest common food. Nor, meanwhile, have the tissues of the body been consumed; so that we cannot suppose force to have been generated at the expense of bulk. Patients treated with stimulants are often hardly emaciated at all; nor can it be asserted, again, that there has been, in these cases, great invisible emaciation, so to speak, of the nervous system; for complete recovery is very rapid. In short, Dr. ANSTIE believes that we cannot hold the action of stimulants to be followed by a more than equivalent recoil.

If, on the contrary, we agree to say that stimulation is indeed followed by a recoil, but that the latter is not greater than the original exaltation, then the statement loses all importance, for such a recoil is exactly what occurs after the digestion of the true food. The narcotic dose of a stimulant, of which we shall presently speak, is alone responsible for the symptoms of a depressive reaction.

2. The central idea of the new theory of narcotics and stimulants is, that a smaller dose of the same substance, as of coffee, hashish, opium, or coca, will produce one class of effects, called stimulant, while a sufficiently large dose of the same substance will produce totally different effects, called narcotic. The substances themselves cannot, but their effects can, be divided into these two distinct classes of stimulant and narcotic; and in the evil effects of narcosis, stimulation has not the slightest share. In other words, Dr. ANSTIE holds that each one of the substances we have named, as well as tea, cocoa, tobacco, the betel-nut, chloroform, and alcohol in its various forms, may be a stimulant or a narcotic, according to the amount of the dose, or to other conditions, which differ in different cases. The action of stimulants may often, he maintains, be highly beneficial; nor are their effects upon the human organism discriminable, according to his argument, from those of food itself. The action of narcotic doses, on the contrary, is essentially injurious, and is only justifiable when a great benefit is to be procured in return, as in the case of narcotising with chloroform or ether during a surgical operation.

In reconstructing the idea of stimulation, Dr. ANSTIE cautions us against the too literal interpretation of the word according to its etymology. Stimulus means, indeed, a spur. But the great surgeon, JOHN HUNTER, defined stimuli as "agents which increase some natural action or tendency," as opposed to irritants, which produce abnormal actions. We should conceive of stimulation not as a sharp thorn plunged suddenly into a sensitive tissue, but rather as "a goad applied to a sluggish ox, whose sensibilities it wounds no further than is sufficient to remind him of work which he has to do, and can do very well if he likes to try." But more than this, Dr. ANSTIE claims that true stimulation supplies, not merely the impulse to act, but a supply of the materials which are necessary to action. He finds the genuine effects of stimulation to be of high import and value. They are the relief of pain, the removal of muscular spasm, the reduction of undue frequency of the circulation, and of excessive secretion, the removal of delirium or of maniacal excitement, the production of healthy sleep, and the support of life in the absence of ordinary food. For the relief of pain, ordinary food, when it can be digested, is often more effective than anything else; opium or alcohol, in small doses, are second in a beneficial effect of this sort. The support of the organism by stimulants, in the absence of ordinary food, is a most remarkable phenomenon, and tends, in Dr. ANSTIE's opinion, to show a further likeness between the essential nature of stimulants and of food. Striking cases of the supporting power of the Peruvian narcotic stimulant, coca, (which must not be confounded with cocoa, an entirely different substance, containing an entirely different principle,) are instanced in the present volumes. VON TSCHUDI relates that an Indian, sixty-two years old, worked for him (at excavation) for five days and nights, consecutively, without any ordinary food at all, and with a very short allowance of sleep, but supported by the coca which he chewed from time to time. At the end of that period he was fresh enough to undergo a long journey. The narcotic action of coca is a different thing; "The effects of it," says Dr. ANSTIE, "are quite as innocuous as anything that we hear of the effects of excess in alcohol or in opium."

Next to coca in its power of replacing ordinary food he reckons tobacco, and next to tobacco, alcohol. His prescriptions, as given in the present volume, show that this substance, taken alone, or with the addition of small quantities of water, only, will prolong life greatly beyond the period at which it must cease if no nourishment, or if water only, had been given; that in acute diseases it has supported not only life, but even the bulk of the body during many days of abstinence from common food; and that in a few instances persons have supported themselves almost solely on alcohol and inconsiderable quantities of water for years. These researches, he claims, settle forever the argument as to the alimentary quality of alcohols, and he meets without concern the assertion that alcohol is unchanged in the tissues; for if this were proved to be the case, it is equally true of water, which is one of the most important of all the foods—one upon which the body may subsist for weeks as its only pabulum beside the air. Dr. ANSTIE finally proposes, in view of these beneficial effects, to restrict the use of the word "stimulants" to those agents which, in the smaller doses, tend "by their direct action to rectify some deficient or too redundant natural action or tendency."

If these, then, contrary to the popular impression, are the legitimate effects of stimulants, how are we to define narcotics? With HIPPOCRATES, narcosis meant the process of benumbing; the verb narkao was used in a passive sense by HOMER and by PLATO. GALEN coined the form whence our word "narcotic" comes. The Arabian writers, too, speak of narcotics as agents opposed to those which quicken and relieve the vital spirits. The distinction is, as we have already intimated, a great and important one. Modern science indicates too that narcotics are deadening agents, which diminish the activity of the nervous system. To discriminate them from the stimulants which we have just been considering, we must bear in mind the vastly different phenomena produced by the same narcotic stimulant drug in different doses. Narcosis may be described as a physiological process, in which the nervous system is deprived, by the agency of a poisoned blood-supply, of its vital characteristics. Unlike stimulation, which sustains and augments life, narcosis, produced by the same substance directly tends to produce death. It causes mental, nervous, muscular, secretory, circulatory and respiratory disturbances. Between true stimulation and narcosis, or narcotism, the difference is immense; nor is it a difference of degree, but one of essential nature.

The line that separates these two opposed conditions is termed by Dr. ANSTIE the poison-line. But the poison-line, in the case of any narcotic, is by no means fixed; i. e., the quantity which would merely stimulate in one case would narcotize in another. The principal modifying conditions are, (a) health and disease—the opium which would kill a well man would save his life when threatened by peritonitis; (b) age—the dose for an adult being poison to a child; (c) habit—we are acquainted with a gentleman, a resident of this City, and over a hundred years old, who takes sixty grains of opium daily, not only without injury, but with positive apparent benefit to his health; (d) individual constitution; (e) sex, and (f) temperament. Each modify the relations between stimulus and narcosis. No general rule can, therefore, be laid down as to the dose required to produce either condition; except that narcotics, when given in smaller quantity than that required to produce the lesser degrees of narcotism, act as stimulant, and that this stimulant action is not produced, even in the slightest degree, by narcotic doses.

3. If, then, this discrimination between stimulant and narcotic action, and the physiological character of the former, as claimed by our author, be accepted, the great practical question of the use or disuse of stimulants is renewed from a quite novel standpoint. And first let us look at the statistics of the actual consumption of stimulants throughout the world, as estimated by VON BIBRA, ["Die Narcotischen Genussmittel und der mensch."]

Coffee leaves are taken, in the form of infusion, by 2,000,000 of the world's inhabitants; Paraguay tea is taken by 10,000,000; cocoa, (the Peruvian stimulant,) by 10,000,000; chicory, either pure or mixed with coffee, by 40,000,000; cacao, as chocolate or in some other form, by 50,000,000; hashish is eaten and smoked by 300,000,000; opium by 400,000,000; Chinese tea is drank by 500,000,000. Finally, all the known nations of the world are addicted to the use of tobacco, chiefly by smoking, and nearly all to the use of some form of alcohol.

In the Chemistry of Common Life Prof. JOHNSTONE completes the picture thus drawn by means of an ingenious map, which shows that no large tract of the earth's surface is without some indigenous narcotic plant, of which the inhabitants freely avail themselves, not merely for medicinal purposes, but for every-day use. It may be added, too, that this universal daily use of stimulants is no modern thing. There is no period of history, as there is no nation upon earth, in which abundant evidence of this custom does not exist.

It is doubtless true that for the inebriate such seclusion is necessary as has been lately described in these columns. For the debauchee of narcotism, whether of opium, alcohol, tobacco, or of any other stimulant used in excessive or narcotic doses, the only cure and the only hope is to be found in total abstinence. For there are many inebriates who, in Dr. ANSTIE's phrase, love to be drunk with their favorite narcotic, "to be carried away from all the actual surroundings of life and placed in a fool's paradise, filled with illusions of sensual delight." To such the recommendation of temperance would be mockery; the cure of such cases is to be found in total abstinence alone. But the further argument of the "teetotaler," if the foregoing views are correct, may be questioned. That argument, as popularly stated, is as follows: "All drunkards were once moderate drinkers. The only sure preventive of drunkenness is, therefore, total abstinence."

As a form of words, this argument is strictly true. If no one would ever touch the first glass, there would certainly be no inebriates. But if stimulants supply a real want of man's nature; if from the beginning of history the whole world has used them freely; if, as is the case, their use has increased in the Christian civilization and the Christian religion, in different forms and forms of stimulants is very small, and if, as Dr. ANSTIE claims to have shown, the moderate use of stimulants is demonstrably beneficial, can it be expected that any considerable number of men will ever abandon their use as a precaution against their abuse? This method of reform is as feasible, it might be added, as would be the plan of preventing railroad accidents by urging travellers to stay at home.

Dr. BEARD's little volume embodies the leading facts and arguments of Dr. ANSTIE's treatise, and of other works upon this important subject, and it may be recommended as a good popular guide to a knowledge of it. As a result of such conscientious labors of Dr. ANSTIE, it cannot be long before whatever difficult points remain in connection with this subject will be made clear, and become the text of practical rules for living.

Woman Suffrage.

HIGHWOOD PARK, N. J., Wednesday, Dec. 31, 1871.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It was with deep thankfulness I read the editorial on woman suffrage in your journal of Dec. 27, for I have long felt that the time of some of our Metropolitan journals on a subject of such momentous consequence as the education, elevation, and enfranchisement of the women of this Republic, was unworthy our state of civilization. Having heretofore preserved a dignified silence, never descendingr to the asperity or abuse of the Tribune, let me congratulate you in leading to a more earnest consideration of this question.

I will endeavor, as briefly as possible, to give you the desired information on the several points suggested in your editorial. First, you desire to know "what proportion of women throughout the country ask suffrage?"

I honestly believe a large majority of the earnest, intelligent women who understand the grandeur of our experiment of self-government, and what a mighty power the ballot is, would gladly use that power to morrow, if secured to them for the best interest of the country. As among men, those women standing on the highest and lowest rounds of the ladder in society, are wholly indifferent to political equality, the former preoccupied with its pleasures, the latter with its penalties, have alien no time nor taste for the consideration of grave national questions, nor knowledge that they owe any duties to the State.

Within the last year I have addressed large audiences in the chief cities, from New-York to San Francisco; have held afternoon meetings for women alone, and talked with hundreds socially, and have been astonished to find them everywhere so ready for the new gospel, "women already citizens by the Fourteenth Amendment."

This reform, as you are aware, has been lifted during the last year from a question of vague generalities to one of constitutional law, and is now being discussed in Congress and the Courts by the ablest statesmen and jurists of the day. You may read the signs of a rapidly-progressing public sentiment everywhere among men and women. When the proposition to strike the word "male" from the Constitution was submitted in Kansas, it received in its favor one-third the votes of the State. When a similar proposition was before the Constitutional Convention of New-York, twenty thousand petitions were presented from the most respectable women of the State, wives of Judges, lawyers, clergymen, Governors, Senators, and Congressmen. Look at the thousands of the best women of England, who have petitioned Parliament for household suffrage, and it is not to be supposed that American women, under a republican theory of government, care less for political equality than those educated under a monarchy.

Where women already have the right to vote in Wyoming, Utah and Kansas, on the school and license questions, they have gladly used their rights, and uniformly for better government.

If the present Congress will give us a "Declaratory act," and the several States take the word "male" from their Constitutions, the women of the Republic will speedily answer this question by voting for the next President. Again you ask, "How do women propose to deal with the thousands of their own sex, who infest great cities, and live by the most shocking of all trades, and who certainly would not form desirable additions to the voting population?" We would open to woman the world of work, and pay her equal wages with man for equal work.

Educate all girls to self-support, knowing that virtue and pecuniary independence go hand in hand. It is the helpless dependence of women on men that makes them the wretched victims of society they are today.

"Give a man," says ALEXANDER HAMILTON, "power over my subsistence, and he has a right over my whole moral being."

The question with us would not be, how to keep these women from the polls, but how to lift them out of their present degraded condition. And political equality is one step in the right direction. Our creeds, codes and customs are all degrading to woman.

To teach the doctrine, as they all do, that woman is man's divinely ordained subject and slave, made for his pleasure, lowers her continually in her own esteem, and in the respect of the man by her side.

Our statute laws, the Bible as taught in our schools and churches, the talk on the streets, are all educating our young men into a contempt for womanhood, and women into a contempt for their own sex.

The Bible says to our sons, "Honor thy father and mother," but our Constitutions and laws practically say, "Honor thy father, but trample thy mother beneath thy feet."

Here is the secret of the social degradation of women. Beneath every wrong of society is ever found some false moral idea to be uprooted before the surface of things can be changed.

We can hardly estimate the moral effect on the men of this nation on seeing the women of their households all crowned with the rights, privileges and immunities of American citizens; no longer their subjects, but sovereigns in their own right, with the ballot, that scepter of power, in their own hands. And the moral effect on the women themselves would be equally marked.

Again you say: "Depraved women would be brought to the polls in great numbers by their cronies, the worst class of men, and hence respectable women would do as respectable men too often do, stay away altogether."

It is fair to suppose that the class of women who have demanded the ballot would be the most ready to use it, and they are, without exception, the most intelligent, refined, virtuous wives and mothers that America or England can boast.

No depraved or vapid women have ever yet identified themselves with the movement. When startled, public women are secured in the right of suffrage, there will be a marshmass thrown round the great act of American citizenship, and the place where it is consummated.

We shall not vote in some rough board shanty, through an old window sash, or at a corner grocery, or some low rum-hole; but we shall assemble in the churches or some beautiful temples dedicated to liberty and equality, and with prayers and thanksgiving, assume those high responsibilities, and our election days will be like the holy season of the Jews in Jerusalem. If we fear the contaminating influence of the ballot box we have to do is to surround ourselves with an atmosphere of such purity as they instinctively avoid.

If, on the contrary, we are so sure of our own moral strength, that, unsullied, we can mingle with all classes of humanity, then our association with the degraded will be a great blessing to them, as we can educate them into some self-respect.

When we remember that ignorance, poverty and vice are crowding our shores from every quarter of the globe; that, threatening at the rate we now act, at the close of this century we shall have 100,000,000 of people under our flag; and that all these are to be educated into the rights and duties of self-government, every wise, thoughtful man must feel that we need the virtue, intelligence, religious earnestness of the women of the Republic all raised to the highest pitch of patriotic enthusiasm for this momentous work. Yours, respectfully,

ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.

The Grand Duke and Newspaper Men—The City Commissioners—Politicians Disappointed—Ash-Heaps and Manure—Illinois Waters Grant.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Monday, Jan. 1, 1872.

We have a live Duke among us today to help celebrate the advent of the New Year. All communities are not so highly favored, and we intend to make the most of it. The Grand Duke ALEXIS and suite arrived here on Saturday evening from Detroit. He was cordially and enthusiastically received by a large assemblage of citizens, and escorted to the New Tremont House, where he was formally tendered the "Freedom of the city" in a speech of welcome by Mayor MEDILL. He replied, in a few brisk and to the point. He is to be escorted over the burned district, and to whatever places of interest we have remaining. Today is to be devoted to the Gen. SHERIDAN is to initiate him into the American (Dutch) custom of making New-Year's calls upon the ladies. He goes to Milwaukee, and on his return will hold a public reception, when, we doubt not, large numbers of our citizens will avail themselves of the opportunity to pay their respects.

CITY FRAUDS.

The special Grand Jury called to investigate the charges of bribery made against the members and ex-members of the Common Council, has partially performed its work, indicting thirteen of them, some of them upon two and three charges. And now our citizens will look forward with interest to their trial, and will watch closely the action of our prosecuting officers, and hold them to a faithful and honest discharge of their duties. There are grave fears that there will be shortcomings in this department of public justice. We notice that the Democratic County Committee, at a meeting held on Saturday evening, by a unanimous vote proffered all aid in their power—pecuniary and legal—to assist—to the public prosecutors. This system of Democratic bribery in Chicago had its origin many years since. During the first few months of the writer's residence here, a friend of his having an interest in some municipal legislation relating to certain lock property, brought the matter to the attention of Alderman G——, a leading member of the Board. After hearing him through, the city father very coolly remarked that Alderman B—— had received an elegant gold watch for voting for another measure which he named. The gentleman took the hint, a watch was purchased, and the ordinance, which put several thousand dollars in his pocket, was passed. This was eighteen years ago, and ever since there has been, as the recurrence of every election, an unseemly scramble for Aldermanships—offices which have a good deal of work, but no legal salary or fees attached to them. And as the bribery business has been the principal inducement for corrupt men to seek a seat in the Common Council. It is to be hoped that this action of the Grand Jury, and that which should legitimately follow it, will put an end to this shameless state of things, for a time at least. The "Ring," like your own, from long impunity, had become bold and unblushing in their robberies, and hence their exposure, and, it is to be hoped, their punishment.

THE REFORM SOCIETY.

The cold weather gave way on Saturday, and it has been much milder since. The work of the General Relief Society, for embraces about four-score thousand families, to whom is extended aid to the extent of the whole or a part of their living. The whole number of families aided since the commencement has been a little over 12,000. Of these, 7,850 were Irish and 3,430 Germans. It is understood that a goodly portion of the Irish were never scorched, but being perfidious beggars, imposed upon the agents of the Society. No great "Irish settlement" was burned over, while the Germans had largely taken possession of the North Side. The Young Men's Christian Association announce that they do not want any more clothing sent, having received nearly one thousand packages, and supplied the wants of the sufferers. From now onward the great demand will be provisions and fuel. The demand will continue large until about the first of March, when it will begin gradually to fall off.

BUILDING.

Work is yet going forward in building and in removing the rubbish, clearing out the foundations, &c., so as to be ready for action as soon as Spring opens. Chicago will be a busy city next Summer. From present appearances every brick that can be procured will be put into walls.

THE GOVERNMENT OFFICES.

The attempt of the Government to purchase the block upon which the old Post-office stands has proved a failure, and, unless condemnation of the land under the law recently passed by the Legislature be resorted to, the location of the Federal offices will be changed. The owners of the land ask the moderate sum of $2,250,000, which, with that already owned by the Government, would make the cost of the site not far from $2,500,000. The Committee justly characterizes the demands of the property-owners as "ridiculously exorbitant." They suppose, however, that if the public buildings are erected in the vicinity of this block the land on their completion will be worth all that is asked for it.

THE STATE PRISON.

The penitentiary of this State, at Joliet, is getting to be a populous institution. It has now 1,325 inhabitants—more than many of our incorporated towns and ambitious young cities. There are only eighteen females, however. It is reported that there is no village or community with a like population in which there are so few on the sick list. It will be remembered that the prison is built upon a solid rock foundation, the whole flooring of the sixteen acres enclosed within the walls being stone of an indefinite thickness. This renders the location so decidedly healthy one. The prison is now paying expenses, and something over. Under the bad management of the first and second Board of Commissioners it ran the State constantly in debt, to the tune of a quarter of a million dollars annually. The prisoners are now mostly hired out to contractors as follows: 250 are at work getting out stone for the new State-house; 125 are making chairs at from 10 to 60 cents a day; 272 are making boots and shoes at 65 cents a day; 175 are coopers at 70½ cents per day; 25 are engaged in harness-making at 60 cents; and 40 are machinists at 65 cents. There are 16 guards and keepers employed.

THE PRESIDENCY.

General politics begin to engage some attention. Although the New-York Tribune is working rather underhandedly and indirectly against Gen. GRANT, the Republican sentiment is pretty unanimously in favor of his renomination. You may rely upon Illinois, even though her two Senators may be unfriendly to the Administration of the present Administration through another term.

BUSINESS.

There is but little general local news of importance. Everything is moving along much better than could have been anticipated. We shall soon encounter the annual post-holiday dullness in business; but still the indications for a large wholesale Winter trade are good.

Board of Health—Slaughter-houses and Mortality—Day of Compulsory Vaccination.

A session of the Board of Health was held yesterday, at which the Sanitary Committee made another report, showing that the streets are not cleaned according to contract. From the several reports, it appeared that otherwise the City is in good sanitary condition. Dr. MORGAN MORGAN, City Sanitary Inspector, reported that during last week thirty-six cases of small-pox were removed to hospital and three bodies removed to the Morgue by the Ambulance Corps. The Vaccination Corps have visited 11,268 families, and performed 4,777 vaccinations, of which 76 were primary and 4,701 secondary. There have also been 1,768 cattle inspected at the market yards.

The following is a comparative statement of contagious diseases reported for the two weeks ending Dec. 30—and for 1871.

Week ending Dec. 30—Typhus fever, 1; typhoid fever, 12; scarlet fever, 48; measles, 105; diphtheria, 8; small-pox, 3.

Week ending Dec. 30—Typhus fever, 1; typhoid fever, 18; scarlet fever, 81; measles, 16; diphtheria, 121; small-pox, 4.

Dr. DELAMS, Health Inspector, of Brooklyn, reports as follows: During the past week there were registered 217 deaths, being an increase over the corresponding week of 1870. Expected to prevent 150 deaths; contagious, 41; zymotic, 24; developmental, 27; parasitic, 1; uncertain, 16. The total number of zymotic deaths reported from 15 to 60 of scarlatina from 24 to 35, and those of diphtheria and croup, together, from 16 to 19. The mortality of measles decreased from 2 to 0, and that of whooping cough from 17 to 15. Typhus fever caused no deaths, and typhoid 6, being in each instance the same number as in the preceding week. Eighteen deaths were due to diarrhoeal affections. The mortality of phthisis pulmonalis rose from 28 to 35, and that of the local respiratory complaints from 79 to 80.

After the transaction of some routine business the Board adjourned to Wednesday next.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Sixth Wedding.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Would you be kind enough to publish again the names of the contributors to the Sixth wedding. Matters having now obtained a different interest from what they had at time of publication. We should like to refresh our minds with the knowledge of who the givers were on that occasion.

Very respectfully yours,

A READER.

Fire Insurance.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Under the suggestive influence of your editorial of Sunday, entitled "Why so Costly?" I have been taking a look at certain official figures running through the past ten years, and giving the respective dividends paid by the two fire insurance companies you have referred to. The result of this inquiry only serves to emphasize the principles your editorial affirms, and proves conclusively that the only way in which money is to be made in fire underwriting is by saving it. To show you how Hartford management compares with New-York management in this particular, I submit this summary of what has happened to every $100 of the stock of each company held by any shareholder from 1862 to 1871.

The Ætna Fire Insurance Company, of Hartford, has declared, during these ten years, cash dividends aggregating 176.74 per cent, and stock dividends of 100 per cent more; and just before the Chicago fire, the Company's shares were selling at 207. In spite of $1,000,000 lost at Chicago, and in the face of all the untowardness of that calamity, the Ætna's shares are in demand now at 165!

Now how is it with our beautiful New-York Company?

The Home Insurance Company in the ten years, 1862-71, has declared cash dividends of 207.06 per cent, and one stock dividend of twenty-five per cent. The highest quotation ever put upon the Company's stock, and that in view of a large stock dividend, was 170 in the Spring of 1871. Previous to the Chicago fire the shares were quoted at 155. As soon as the extent of the loss was known the Company's stock dropped to 50; and, now that a sixty per cent. assessment has been paid in, any quantity can be had at par.

Let us see how this makes the matter stand.

Par value of Ætna stock	$100 00
Add cash dividends in ten years	176 74
Add stock dividends in ten years	100 00
Total	$376 74
Deduct fifty per cent. called up	50 00
	$326 74
Add present premium on stock	165 00
Present state of the investment	$491 74

Had the $100 been invested at compound interest during the ten years it would now be worth about $200; but here we see that under the influence of economical management the $100 has gained $391 74, or 65 per cent more than the interest compounded.

But when we apply the same test to the Company whose costly management has very justly attracted your attention, we get these results:

Par value of stock	$100 00
Cash dividends in ten years	207 06
Stock dividends in ten years	25 00
Total	$332 06
Deduct sixty per cent. assessment	60 00
	$272 06

In this case the Company is shown to have paid only simple interest on its paid-up capital, (having had meanwhile from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 of accumulated assets drawing interest) and at the end of the ten years stockholders are just where they started, with stock at par and no prospect of a dividend for months to come. Such are the results of extravagant management; and your characteristic exposure of this example of lavish expenditure is welcomed as a step in the right direction.

UNDERWRITER.

Insurance Companies.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

We have read with great interest your remarks on the management of one of our largest fire insurance companies. What has been said has been received with gratitude by a very large number of stockholders, who have hitherto had no redress from the management which has been enriching itself out of what justly belongs to them. If you can unearth the jobs of these officers, the processes which they have resorted to for the attainment of selfish ends, the ballot-box stuffing and the foul prostitution of authority which has resulted from their abuse of proxies, you will accomplish a noble work and drive from their places the men who are hateful to thousands of hitherto helpless stockholders, among whom are men who have at stake the hard-earned savings of a life's arduous efforts.

When they joined this Company these officers were, without exception, poor men. Since then they have accumulated fortunes. Two of them own elegant country-seats, one owns a large amount of stock and is the President of a foreign company, and they were all instrumental in starting a bank in the City a short time since. They own a large amount of the Company's stock, and it is said hold proxies sufficient to keep them in power.

These years ago the officers procured an amendment at Albany, which enabled them to make a wholesale watering of the stock, that netted them, as you have correctly said, some $100,000. Immediately thereafter the stock fell in value from 170 to 125, and afterward to 150; and the effect was such that several honest men on the Board of Direction, who did all in vain labored against this watering, resigned. Among these were JAS. LOW, GEORGE BLIND, and other well-known gentlemen of this City, each of whom can tell a curious story if he desires. Their places were supplied by others, and the combination had steadily gained in strength.

Lacking in the talent and experience necessary to successful underwriting, they have sought by adventure and cunning to blind the eye of the public to their deficiencies. They have squandered within the past ten years, for salaries, expenses and useless printing, and other expenses, an amount exceeding the total of cash dividends paid by nearly 41,000,000. To intimidate the officers of other companies whom they could not hope to blind, they keep in their pay a sweeper renegade, who assumes the respectability of a blackmailing sheet the name of which was filched with this contemptuous. To keep this sheet alive, thousands of the stockholders' money are annually wasted.

They have always been disturbers of the peace of principle, and they have no friends in other insurance companies.

Although they stated their Chicago losses at $1,000,000, we have assert that their actual losses will greatly exceed this figure, and we know that they are resorting to every means to "shave" in their settlements. Their losses will appear correctly stated or otherwise, in their annual statement soon to be published, and which the minor officers will testify to, the Presidents of the Company having found it convenient to go to Chicago just before New-Year's, and there, we are informed, he has rented an elegant house for the purpose of facilitating adjustments, and whether a plentiful stock of champagne, and, perhaps, pressingly with mockbottom, accompanies them.

In Wall-street today Money is again very dear and stocks up. The Money lenders outside of Bank (and, perhaps, occasionally in Bank) have systematized the practice of selling Money late in the day at the highest price—or commission, if the term be preferred. The wealthiest Brokers of the Stock Exchange do not hesitate to pay the price demanded, where they are carrying more Stocks at advanced and advancing rates, than their own means can take care of, and, in turn, the wealthiest Banking firms (and Banks, it may be,) hesitate as little to take all the price they can get. An eighth ⅌ cent. a day and 7 ⅌ cent. per annum are the most common terms since the New-Year, as they were through the closing week of December, and there need be no surprise felt that Stocks can stand the costly operation, from day to day, so long as they go up. The inconvenience is to another class of borrowers, who are carrying or attempting to negotiate Bonds, or Bonds and Mortgages, or Merchant paper, not so available as Railroad Stocks, Western Telegraph, Pacific Mail, &c., on the Stock Exchange. The Public Funds of the United States and the favorite, old-established Railway Mortgages, for the most part, (especially the former,) take care of themselves. The holders of Gold on speculation pay dear rates for carrying over their balances, but they live in the expectation of a better time for their valuable commodity, or of breaking somebody, who has sold Short on small means, as the case seems to have been in one or two instances yesterday.

There was little or no mitigation in the terms for Money today, while the course of the Stock market was equally strong with Tuesday's transactions both on the Railroads and on the Miscellaneous Shares. After the late Boards the following quotations were made as compared with Tuesday night. Gold was barely steady, and Foreign Exchange a fraction easier than yesterday.

The dearness of Money at the close of the day affected the Gold Market; sales down to 109 ⅌ cent.; and also the Public Funds, which close ¼@½ ⅌ cent. lower than yesterday. There is much discussion on the Street as to the causes and probable continuance of the high price of Money, when the payments of the New Year Dividends ought, in ordinary course, to make a different state of the Market. It is not improbable that recent events among the Banks, connected directly or indirectly with the exposure and explosion of the Tammany Ring, have induced extra caution with the old and sounder Banks, while the run on the Third-avenue Savings Bank has withdrawn a million or more of Greenback Notes from the down-town Banks in the Clearing-house. The constant operation of paying off the Treasury 3 ⅌ cent. Greenback Certificates, held as reserve by the Bank, also begins to be felt. There was little or no mitigation of the terms for Money at the close of the day. Some of the Banking-houses are having a harvest of profit for the use of their balances.

It is probable that the present run on the Third-avenue Savings Bank, as well as its predecessor in October, might have been averted by prompter action on the part of the State Superintendent of Banking. He had the Bank examined in July or August, by two Examiners, and the result was not satisfactory. The Report of one of the Examiners, Mr. Hennessy, was shown to us some weeks ago, after failing to elicit the further action of the Superintendent, and it was our purpose to discuss the weak points in the concern as soon as it could be done without prejudice to the Half-yearly Dividends of the other Banks, to be written up for Depositors on New-Year's Day. We deem it but justice to the minority of the Managers, who felt compelled to retire after failing to correct the blunders and strengthen the securities of the Bank, to add, on the authority of the very candid representations (and letters to the Board) of one of their number, Dr. Dunn, that their motives are undeserving the reproach of mere malice.

On the exposed condition and mismanagement of the general Savings System of New-York, we think the Governor, in his Annual Message of yesterday, has mistaken or failed to appreciate the proper remedies. It would do no good now to exclude the larger class of Depositors, although it is doubtless true that the original purpose of the system has been departed from in receiving sums over a few thousand dollars to the credit of Wealthy Depositors. The evils are not to be sought in the amounts accumulated, but rather in the mode and security of their investment, and the generally incautious and sometimes extravagant administration—reaching after high rates of interest at the expense of absolute security and ready and unfailing availability or conversion into Cash, to meet every possible emergency. The opening of the system to City and County Bonds, and to other Bonds outside the State of New-York, without limit, and to loans to Brokers on call, on mixed collateral, was a blunder of the most dangerous nature. The indiscriminate use of Bond and Mortgage upon Real Estate, sometimes, if not as a rule, on fancy or exaggerated valuations—created by the very facility through the Savings Banks and Life Insurance Companies—out of all proportion to the readier and always available security, without loss, of the Public Funds of the United States and the Stocks of the State of New-York, is also a perversion of the system. It may be objected that the Public Debt of the United States and the State of New-York are being constantly paid off, and the prices of these Stocks too high. But in truth, they are not too high, and in no danger of being too high, to satisfy the Depositors of the Savings Banks, whatever they may be to their expensive administration. Four-fifths of the former would be satisfied with four, or at most five ⅌ cent. to insure entire safety, rather than six ⅌ cent. and the hope of seven ⅌ cent., at the hazard of loss or delay or depreciation on the securities of the Bank. This principle or preference was the original intent and spirit of the system. It has been so rapidly and dangerously departed from of late years that popular confidence in the system itself is gradually giving place in vague distrust. And the same feeling will soon extend to the Policy holders in the Life Insurance Companies, unless there is a reform in the extravagant agencies and loose investments and white-washing examinations of these institutions.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

ONE MILLION NORTHERN PACIFIC 7-30S

WERE SOLD DURING

DECEMBER.

And January opens with an active demand.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company offers to the public an investment security which combines the ready negotiability, the convenience and the high credit of a first-class Railroad Bond, with the solidity and safety of a Real Estate Mortgage on Land worth at least twice the amount loaned.

The Bonds present the following leading features:

1. They are exempt from United States duty; the Principal and Interest are payable in gold—the principal in thirty years, and the interest semi-annually at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent. per annum. Denomination from $100 to $10,000. Present selling price—par and accrued interest in currency.

2. The bonds are a first and only Mortgage on the Road, its Equipments and Earnings, and also on a Land Grant averaging 28,000 acres to each mile of track.

3. They are at all times receivable at 10 per cent. premium, (1.10,) in payment or exchange for the Company's Land at market prices—a provision which practically gives the holder the power of foreclosure as will.

4. The proceeds of all sales of land are required to be devoted by the trustees of the bondholders, (Messrs. Jay Cooke and J. Edgar Thomson,) as a sinking fund to the purchase and cancellation of the first mortgage bonds, or temporarily to the payment of interest thereon if necessary.

Exchanging 5-20s. In view of the ability and fixed policy of the Government to call in its 5-20s, and substitute a low-interest bond—$140,000,000 having been called in for cancellation since Sept. 1—many holders of 5-20s are exchanging them for Northern Pacifics, thus adding to their principal the present premium on Government Bonds, and increasing their yearly interest income nearly one-third.

All marketable stocks and bonds will be received at current prices in exchange for Northern Pacific Seven-thirties without expense to the investor.

JAY COOKE & CO.,
Philadelphia, New-York & Washington.

A Favorite New-England Security.

To all seeking absolute safety for their investments, rather than high rates of interest, (which very rarely accompany such choice,) we confidently recommend the JOINT SINKING FUND GOLD BONDS of the SEVERN CORPORATIONS comprising the VERMONT DIVISION of the PORTLAND and OGDENSBURG TRUNK RAILROAD LINE, the most important link to a line shorter by more than fifty miles than any other between the great lakes and the seaboard, and having a local business more than sufficient to pay operating expenses and all interest obligations, in addition to the estimated through traffic which must be attracted to the shortest line and easiest grades. As a route for tourists and pleasure travel, it cannot be equal in the American Continent.

The road is completed and in successful operation for nearly one-half the entire distance, at a cost considerably below the original estimates.

The Bonds are in denominations of $1,000, $500, and $100, and cannot be issued for more than $20,000 per mile of road. The interest (SIX PER CENT. GOLD) is payable semi-annually, FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX, principal also redeemable in gold in 1887, and are offered until further notice at 90 and accrued interest in currency.

NO BONDS IN THE MARKET OFFER EQUAL SECURITY AND PROFIT to those having Five-Twenties and other high-priced securities to convert. Many of the most conservative investors in the country have subscribed largely to this popular loan, and the balance remaining unsold, it is believed, will be rapidly absorbed.

☞ ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY'S FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND LAND GRANT BONDS,

FREE OF TAX,

AND IN DENOMINATIONS OF $1,000, $500, AND $100, can be obtained from the undersigned, or through the principal banks and bankers throughout the United States.

The attractive features of these securities are recognized in the fact that, although they have been but a short time on the market, they are nearly all absorbed; and but a small amount are now for sale.

They combine a perfect security with a liberal rate of interest. This interest account is made light for, and easily borne by, the Company, through the operation of the Sinking Fund arising from sales of the Company's land, which in many cases draw interest at the rate of ten (10) per cent. per annum. The security behind them is ample in every particular, as they constitute a first and only mortgage on a trunk line of railroad which will soon connect the City of St. Joseph, Mo., (an important railway centre,) with the Union Pacific Railroad at Fort Kearney, materially shortening the distance between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. In addition to this, the bonds have further security in the fact that there is included in the Mortgage the Company's magnificent Lands, amounting to 1,600,000 acres, known to be among the best in the United States. The Mortgage Indenture prohibits the sale of these Lands at less than Four (4) Dollars per acre, and payable to the Trustees under the Mortgage, for the clear and express purpose of retiring these Bonds. The amount thus realized exceeds the entire amount of Bonds which can be issued, and leaves the road, property and franchises free.

The Bonds have thirty years to run, with interest at Eight per Cent., free of tax, payable in February and August in each year.

Both principal and interest are payable in gold.

The principal at New-York. The interest at either New-York, London or Frankfort-on-the-Main, at the option of the holder, without notice, and in the gold currency of the country in which they are presented. They are coupon or registered.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

The present price of these Bonds is 90 and accrued interest in currency, from Aug. 15, 1871. Just then was undoubtedly as low as they should sell, but now we consider the right is reserved to advance the present selling price without notice.

Maps, circulars, documents and full information furnished on application.

Strongly urging the superior merits of the note of this house, our firm buy and sell in their regular business the bonds of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, those of the Eastern Division eight per cent. ☞ MIDLAND RAILROAD.

FIRST MORTGAGE, 7 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS.

Limited to $20,000 per mile on finished road.

The rapid progress toward completion of this great Grand Line from New-York to the West and to Canada, enables us to offer to investors at par and interest a further limited issue of these favorite securities.

Upward of 240 miles of this road, including the New-Jersey section, are already finished, equipped, and in operation; and contracts with responsible parties have been made for its entire completion by the first day of July next. When this shall have been accomplished its earnings cannot fail to be large and highly remunerative, as it has advantages at least equal to those of any of its competitors for both local and through business. It is building for cash, of which nearly $6,000,000 Aids bonds have been subscribed by subscription to its stock at PAR. The work is substantial, and, including equipment, has not exceeded in cost $60,000 per mile, which is less than one-third of the amount at which some of the trunk lines of roads leading from New-York are capitalized, and on which they are paying good dividends.

In view of these facts, the Midland First Mortgage Bonds must be regarded as a first-class security, quite as safe as Governments; and, by making the exchange at the present difference in price, holders of Midland Bonds will realize 30 per cent. more of revenue upon the amount invested than the holders of Government Bonds.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

The Atlantic-Street Pavement—Protest of Mr. Cost to Vacate the Assessment.

Yesterday the petition of WM. A. COST to vacate the assessment for repairing Atlantic-street from Henry-street to Flatbush-avenue, came up before Judge PRATT in the Supreme Court Special Term. It charges that the advertising for proposals by the Water Board for the repavement of Atlantic-street with the Nicolson pavement was a mere form and pretense on the part of the Water Board, and resorted to not for the purpose of obtaining proposals for doing such, or of subjecting the same to public competition, or of ascertaining the lowest responsible bidder, but as a means of giving color to an arrangement which the Board had previously made with the Nicolson Pavement Company, to have the work of repaving done by that Company. The work of repaving was awarded to the Nicolson Pavement Company, notwithstanding, forty-five bids by John Leech, B. R. Sturgis, William Sweeny, William Mogh, E. C. Flanders, and J. Mullen, ranging from 5c. per yard lower than the price previously arranged by the Board with the Nicolson Pavement Company as the price at which the work should be done.

The release of the Brooklyn and Jamaica Railroad from all the expense of the repaving is charged to be in violation of the rights of the petitioner and contrary to law. The contract for the Nicolson pavement is charged to have been not in good faith, nor in the bona fide exercise of the discretion vested in the Water Board, and their adoption of that kind of pavement, and their causing Atlantic-street to be repaved with it, were made to be corrupt and fraudulent acts on the part of the Board.

The answer put in by the city denies all the charges of fraud and irregularity set forth in the petition, and claims that the work has been purely a local benefit, and the land-owners are the persons to pay for it.

The counsel for the plaintiff opened the case at some length, stating the facts contained in the petition, and giving a short sketch of the history of Atlantic-street since it was opened. He then placed Mr. Cost, the petitioner, upon the stand, who testified as to the facts of his ownership of the land mentioned in the petition, and also that he had filed a remonstrance against the confirmation of the assessment. On cross-examination he asserted that before Atlantic-street was repaved with Nicolson pavement, it was paved with the best water stone, and that he had petitioned the Water Board to have the pavement relaid.

The case was submitted to the Court for decision.

The Tribune complains that Federal officials interested themselves in the election of HENRY SMITH, as Speaker of the Assembly. In the same breath it admits that Mr. SMITH is a man of "decided ability" and "unblemished reputation." It does not appear, then, that the Federal officials who constantly haunt the imagination of the Tribune were doing much harm at Albany—supposing they were there. Is a man to be disqualified from taking any part in public affairs because he has the misfortune to be a "Federal official?" Surely such persons have as much right to be at Albany, or anywhere else, as the following "officials," or Tammany magnates, who went to Albany to work might and main for THOMAS C. ALVORD:—ABRAHAM BROWN, Clerk to the Health Board, salary $2,000; WILLIAM A. DE CAMP, Clerk to Fire Marshal; ROBERT C. BROWN, Tammany contractor for pipes; "HANK" SMITH, Police Commissioner; Gen. BARNUM, Tax Office; CHARLES POLHAMUS, Fire Department; JOHN V. GRIDLEY, MARK LANAGAN, TOM MULLIGAN, A. D. BARBER, ABE VAN VECHTEN, BEN FIELD, &c., &c. We hear no complaint from the Tribune about the interference of these men in the election for Speaker. The public are sincerely to be congratulated on the defeat of the above corrupt horde.—By the by, when does "HANK" SMITH mean to return the money of the Bowling-green Savings Bank depositors? The farce enacted yesterday at the bank is too contemptible for serious notice.

We publish today a letter from Mr. BARCOCK, on behalf of the Tax Commissioners. Mr. BABCOCK altogether evades the point of our remarks, which was, that through corrupt favoritism probably thirty per cent. of the real estate of the City escapes taxation at the expense of the remainder. If Mr. BABCOCK'S "denial" means anything, it is that the real estate of the City is valued on the books of the Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments at less than thirty per cent. short of its actual value. In that case Mr. WELLS and his fellow Commissioners are grossly in error in concluding from the "large amount of evidence recently collected by an expert," for their guidance, that the official valuation of the real estate of New-York is sixty per cent. short of its actual value. Mr. BABCOCK'S defense that the law is more nearly complied with here than in the country is no defense at all. An evasion of the law involves "willful and corrupt perjury." An undervaluation of twenty to twenty-five per cent. must be quite as criminal as an undervaluation of fifty or sixty per cent. The simple remedy for the State's grievances is to have the law rigidly administered everywhere. The remedy for favoritism in valuation is to get the present Board of Tax Commissioners out of office.

An excellent article which we append from Harper's Weekly, draws a just distinction between fair and unfair criticism of the Administration. Consciously or unconsciously, the Tribune is undoubtedly doing far more to injure the Republican Party than its weaker Gen. GRANT—and hence is in no this moment greater to favor with Democratic reports than the strongest.

Their "editorials" nowadays are literally excluded from the Tribune's columns. Nothing can be more proper than to criticise Gen. GRANT'S public policy in an adverse spirit, whenever there is good occasion for it—an such criticism we have never been backward. But to endeavor to break him down for the purpose of gratifying personal hostility, or to resent grudges founded on the distribution of offices, is a course unworthy any journal which represents the Republican Party. It is to be hoped that our contemporary will be induced to reconsider its present tactics, and confine itself to criticisms which are based upon considerations of public good. We do not believe that any paper can succeed in throwing the Presidential election into the hands of the Democrats—but it certainly is not worth while for the Tribune to try that experiment.

The Spanish Question.

Our Washington dispatches, received at an early hour this morning, foreshadow serious complications between the United States and Spanish Governments, should the course of recent events prove prejudicial to the interests of the American people. The Spanish Cabinet changes and the recall of Señor ROMERO are considered hostile in their intent by President GRANT and his Cabinet, while the boarding of the Florida by a Spanish man-of-war, if officially confirmed, will be considered as adding to the existing Cuban complications. As will be seen by our reports, the United States Government, while unwilling to decide these questions until official data is at hand, considers it only prudent to make such preparations as may be necessary in case the difficulty should assume its worst phase. Of course, there will be many ready to magnify the gravity of the situation, and assume that immediate war is intended. The Administration, however, evidently purposes to maintain the dignity of the nation, though we presume that many of the unfavorable actions of Spain will in time be properly explained or rectified. There is no danger of war yet, despite the excitement naturally manifested at Washington, but it will be gratifying to the people to know that their Government is ready to assert its rights should any foreign Power assail them.

Progress at Albany.

No time ought to be lost at Albany in effecting those reforms which the people demanded and voted for last November. We are happy to be able to record that many members of the Legislature seem to be fully alive to this fact. Yesterday, Col. HAWKINS introduced a bill for confirming the acts of Judge BEDFORD'S Grand Jury, and authorizing the extension of their time. We believe there never was a Grand Jury in the City which did so much good work as this one, and their names ought not to be forgotten by the public. We republish them in a complete form: Lucius J. Comstock, W. B. Dinsmore, Thos. W. Knox, Wm. Schaus, Wilson Small, John H. Draper, Andrew C. Armstrong, Wm. J. Ives, Samuel M. Beckley, Joseph Bloom, Lewis Fatman, Thomas Dunlap, Washington McKenzie, Ernst Steyer, C. W. McAuliffe, John B. Ayres, James Reese, Oscar A. Nathusius, Roland S. Doty, Amos D. Ashmead.

Mr. TWOMBLY, who was a personal victim of the Tammany rule which so long prevailed, also introduced a bill for the removal of the Corporation Counsel, Mr. O'GORMAN, and his assistant. It is quite proper that these men should go. The bill also removes "TOM" FIELDS from the office which he disgraces. The power of appointing successors in these cases is to be placed in the hands of Controller GREEN, until the new charter is passed. In the Senate, the memorial which we have already described, for the expulsion of TWEED, was duly presented.

So far, good. All this looks like business. The honest members must press on the work, regardless of cliques and factions, and with the perfect confidence that the public are at their back. This is worth more to them than all the combinations which the old wire-pullers and political hacks can possibly form. Everything done at Albany will be closely watched, day after day, and the people will not forget those who are faithful to them. So far there has been no mystery or double dealing. The absurd cry about "Federal interference" will not blind the public to the good which is being done. Col. HAWKINS, Mr. TWOMBLY, and all other upright men, can afford to disregard the intrigues of "Fentonites" or any other "ites" while they labor honestly and sincerely for the full accomplishment of those reforms which the people are determined to have, cost what they may.

To-Night's Meeting of the Bar Association.

We trust that every member of the Bar Association will make a point of attending the special meeting which has been called for this evening. The Judiciary Committee was lately instructed to inquire into the charges of corruption which have been made against some of the Judges of this City. The report of that Committee is ready to be presented at the meeting tonight. It is hardly necessary to say that ample evidence has been obtained to substantiate the opinions of the public and the profession, with regard to the practices of some of the occupants of the local Bench. That evidence is, we understand, of a kind which can be used for the impeachment of the corrupt Judges, and the Association will doubtless resolve upon a vigorous prosecution of the work for which the Committee have found ample materials.

Thanks either in behalf of the profession or the public, the importance of the immediate removal of our corrupt Judges can hardly be over-estimated. For years the tone of the New-York Bar has been lowered, and its general reputation throughout the Union perceptibly impaired, from the fact of some of its members having co-operated with a few well-known Judges to make justice an affair of sale and barter. Suitors bringing cases into Court inquired, not so much into the professional standing of the lawyer they were to select, as into the extent of his "influence" with the Judge before whom their appeal would be brought. Good and upright occupants of the Bench found their reputations tarnished by contact with others, who allowed no scruples to stand in the way of satisfying their greed, or the demands of their party leaders. Able and honest members of the Bar were compelled to see business pass by them to fill the already overloaded hands of men who, though as ignorant as they were presumptuous, grew wealthy and powerful because they were "in" with Judges as unscrupulous as themselves. New-York lawyers, who believed in a sweeping reform both of Bench and Bar, have had an up-hill fight. They have had to contend against the aversion of lawyers, of long experience and standing, to engage in what they considered to be a hopeless battle. The public did not adequately appreciate the greatness of the task they had undertaken, and everything seemed to combine to show them that the hour for striking effective blows at the corruption of the Judiciary and the profession had not yet arrived.

The TIMES has frequently appealed to the Bar Association to move in spite of obstacles of whose existence we were perfectly aware, but of whose strength a time of doubt and struggle was no season to speak. Thanks to an awakened public sentiment, and to the steady perseverance of a few members of the Bar Association, there need be no further talk of outside influences conspiring against reform. The public have daily illustrations of the impossibility of maintaining a pure administration of local affairs while corrupt Judges are permitted to occupy the Bench, and they look to the Bar Association to begin the active work of punishment and removal. The Judges to be attacked have no longer at their back the political and financial resources of the Ring, and the new State Attorney-General, FRANCIS A. BARLOW, is the sworn foe of all forms of corruption and fraud. The Bar Association will, therefore, begin its active labors toward the purification of the Judiciary under the most favorable circumstances. The duty which they owe to themselves as well as to the public urgently demands that they should make the most of their present opportunity. We have no doubt that the results of tonight's meeting will show that they are fully resolved to do so.

Gov. Hoffman on Constitutional Reform.

Gov. HOFFMAN'S proposition for a radical reform of the Constitution, with reference to the Executive and Legislature—the Judiciary article having been just remodeled—is a very striking one. We are mistaken if it does not afford an occasion which the present Legislature would do well to seize upon, for procuring the removal of the many inconsistencies and defects that make our present Constitution almost a marvel of inefficiency. The Governor's position in the matter entitles his recommendations to respect. We do not conceal from ourselves his connection with the audacious conspiracy which for two years embraced the entire State Government in its machinations. But it is plain to every one that the fetters of that connection are broken, and the Governor's experience and unquestioned ability give value to his views of the fundamental law he has been engaged in administering.

It will be noticed that the Governor's propositions are not in harmony with the most pronounced tendencies of his own party, and that they agree very closely with the opinions of his political opponents. Coming from a Republican Governor, they would be stigmatized by the Democratic Press as tainted with the mania for centralization which has, in the opinion of that Press, raged throughout the country as a peculiar consequence of Republican supremacy. The Governor's propositions are briefly as follows: The strengthening of the office of Governor by lengthening his term to three years; giving him the absolute appointment of the Secretary of State and Attorney-General, and indirectly control of the appointment of District-Attorneys; giving him the appointment, with the consent of the Senate, of the Controller, a Superintendent of Canals, (to perform all the duties now devolving on the three Canal Commissioners and the State Engineer,) and a Superintendent of Prisons; removing the limit on the length of legislative sessions; giving a liberal salary to members; providing for the actual reading on three separate days of every bill; restraints on special legislation; the strengthening of the veto power; the election of Assemblymen by counties; and the election of Senators by larger districts for a term of four or five years.

No one familiar with the administration of State affairs will fail to see that the suggestions of the Governor with reference to the Executive branch of the Government are in the right direction, and that they hardly go far enough to reach all the recognized evils that have grown up in that branch under the present Constitution. The main interests of the State are in the enforcement of civil and criminal law, the administration of the canals, the equal assessment of taxes, the proper supervision of railways, insurance companies, and banks, and the care of the general school system. It is plain that these are all matters in which the people should have the best attainable facilities for securing energy, probity, and such professional or technical knowledge and capacity in their officers as occasionally called for. It is equally plain, for experience has demonstrated it as clearly as any general truth of daily life, that these qualities are not most readily or certainly secured by popular elections of numerous officers, among whom the duties of the various Departments of the Government are parcelled out in a confused and even conflicting manner, for periods of time so arranged as to make harmonious and energetic co-operation little less than a miracle. When we reflect, for instance, that the Canal Board is made up of the Lieutenant-Governor and State Engineer and Surveyor, elected for one term, the Secretary of State, Controller, Attorney-General, and Treasurer elected for another term, and three Canal Commissioners elected each one for still another term, and five out of these nine officers chosen for special duties entirely unconnected with the canals,—we need not be surprised that the management of these internal improvements has been, for years, marked by more or less confusion, extravagance, and incompetency. Of nearly the same character is the composition of the Board of Inspectors of the State Prisons, one of whom goes out of office every year, and who are responsable to no one in particular for the administration of their charge. Another purely executive department, and one of the most important,—the supervision of insurance companies,—is intrusted to officers elected by joint ballot of the two Houses of the Legislature, and accountable only to the Legislature, the composition of which changes several times during their term of office.

These do not embrace all the varieties of tenure of office in the Executive Department of our State Government, but they are sufficient to show the utter impracticability of securing consistency, thoroughness, and sense of responsibility in its administration. The remedy proposed by the Governor is to concentrate the control of these various branches in the Chief Executive of the State, and to hold him responsible for them. It is a practical remedy, and but applies the methods of business life to the transaction of public business.

The suggestions of the Governor in regard to the Legislature require separate consideration.

"Full Value."

Mr. HENRY HILTON'S assertion that the City has in all cases received full value for the money paid out during his career as Park Commissioner, is at once the greatest draft upon public credulity, and the boldest of the audacious assertions of the Ring and its tools.

Mr. HILTON spent for new work at the Central Park alone, in eighteen months, no less than $1,467,000, while in the entire thirteen years of the old Park Commissioners, during which they transformed the Central Park from a rugged waste to a beautiful park, they spent only $5,775,000, and in no year of that time did they spend as much as HILTON in the time named, while their average yearly expenditure was less than half a million. Let us state it again: It cost the old Park Commissioners to redeem the land appropriated for a park, to lay out the roads, to build the bridges, to plant the trees, to make the lakes, and build the walls, less than half a million a year, or, in all, less than six millions; and yet HILTON claims to have spent, during a portion of 1870 and 1871, $1,467,000, and audaciously asserts that the City got full value for this enormous expenditure. Does any frequenter of the Park believe him?

In a period of eighteen months, HENRY HILTON claims to have spent $737,000 for the maintenance of the Central Park; that is, its current expenses. Does any one believe that the City got full value for any such expenditure? The old Commissioners spent, if we remember, a little over $200,000 a year for maintenance. Our friend HILTON spent $322,000 in improving the Battery, and $19,000 more is needed to complete the work. He spent $106,000 on the City Hall Park, and $28,500 is needed there; he spent $214,000 on Washington-square, and about $30,000 more is needed; he spent $90,000 on Tompkins-square, $66,000 on Madison-square, where $76,000 more is needed; $73,000 on Reservoir-square, and $13,000 more will be wanted; $81,000 on Union-square, and $50,000 more is needed; and $18,000 on the Fourth-avenue park, and from $2,000 to $6,000 each on Bowling-green, the Cooper Institute, Duane-street, Beach-street, Grand-street, Five Points, and Sixth-avenue patches of green, called parks. It will take more than the assistance of any Tarrytown of the Ring to make any intelligent man believe that these expenditures were proper, or that the City got anything like value for them.

How HILTON scattered money is shown by the magnificent frame-work of departments and bureaus, and the army of employes which he organized. He had first the Bureau of Accounts, with its Controller's office, its disbursing office, and its property clerk's office, employing some thirty clerks and messengers, at salaries ranging from $5,200 to a dollar a day. Then the Bureau of Construction and Repairs had some sixty employes, from the Engineer in Chief at $6,000, down to the thirty axmen at two dollars and a half a day. The Bureau of the Central Park had a Superintendent at $6,000, and nine subordinates; the Bureau of Landscape Gardening, a chief at $3,000; two assistants at $2,500, and four subordinates. The Bureau of Civil and Topographical Engineering had a chief at $5,200, and three division engineers at $3,000, four assistant engineers at from five to ten dollars a day, and twenty-one subordinates. The Bureau of Architecture had an architect in chief at $5,000 a year, an architect superintendent at $4,500, and three subordinates. The Bureau of Police had a Captain at $3,000, a Lieutenant at $1,700, eight Sergeants at $3 75 per day, two Surgeons at $2,500 a year, and 153 roundsmen, patrolmen, park-keepers, and gate-keepers, the latter fifty-six in number, at $3 per day. The Bureau of Public Squares and Places had a Superintendent at $4,000 and fifty subordinates.

If we had a little Irish reports, we think that one patrolman performed the duty of walking after the Bowling-green, while the City Hall Park, which has a regular force of the regular Police in it, needed in addition four park patrolmen. The Bowling-green, Beach-street, Canal-street, Cooper Institute patches, called parks, each had a patrolman. Tompkins Park required four, Union Park and Madison Park, the Reservoir Park, and the strips on Fourth-avenue, each had two, while Mount Morris Park had three.

The number of laborers, &c., employed was, in January, 2,094, but increased to 4,336 in August; was 3,407 on Nov. 1, 3,633 on Nov. 6, (election day,) 3,030 on Nov. 14, 2,865 on Nov. 21, and 2,451 on Nov. 27—that is to say, within three weeks after election no less than 1,797 laborers were dismissed, their votes being no longer needed to elect HILTON'S associate Park Commissioner, TOM FIELDS, to the Legislature. Perhaps, however, what HILTON means is that the City got value for its six millions, because the expenditure of that enormous sum resulted in the election of FIELDS to the Assembly.

A Vicissitude of Wealth.

WE chronicled a week or two ago, among our English news, the death of Gen. BOUVERIE, an old Waterloo officer, who had for many years been a member of the Queen's household. The event itself was in no wise remarkable, but it has been attended with circumstances of the sort which give to Sir BERNARD BURKE'S Vicissitudes of Families their peculiar interest and popularity.

In the famous hunting county of Northampton, within a few miles of the villages where BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S fathers had held lands for upward of three centuries, and some of WASHINGTON'S ancestors lie buried in the church-yard contiguous to the ancient manor-house which long was theirs, stands Delapre Abbey. Its monastic possessors, chapel, cells, and refectory, have long disappeared, but a portion of the cloisters, metamorphosed into servants' offices, still remain in memory of the monks of old. After passing through various hands, subsequent to the dissolution of religious houses, it devolved, through marriage with an heiress, on Hon. EDWARD BOUVERIE, the younger son of Viscount FOLKESTONE. This gentleman seldom resided on his estate, and long before his death resigned it to his son, who, unlike his father, was devoted to field sports, greatly improved the property, and was long a prominent member of the famous Pytchley Club, whose exploits are almost as familiar to sporting readers on this as on the other side of the Atlantic.

Like his father, Mr. EDWARD BOUVERIE married an heiress, by whom he had a numerous family of sons and daughters. Of the latter none married. Of the former, the gentleman just deceased was the eldest. On his marriage it was arranged that the property should descend to the sons and their issue, according to seniority. Gen. BOUVERIE had no children, nor had any of his brothers, (all of whom died before him,) with the exception of a certain ne'er-do-well FRANK. This FRANK was, when quite young, quartered with his regiment in the North of Ireland. There he fell in love with a girl far beneath him in station, whom he was persuaded to marry. The BOUVERIES, in whom pride of birth was intensely strong, were wounded by this connection in their tenderest point, and FRANK received an intimation that henceforward his presence would be dispensed with at the Abbey. But, as years passed on, and the wives of his elder brothers remained childless, matters assumed a different aspect. FRANK died, but left a son, who thenceforth became heir presumptive to an ancient and splendid heritage.

His mother was a Roman Catholic, and he had been brought up in her faith; a circumstance which increased the repugnance of the BOUVERIES to recognize him as their heir. But, as it seemed inevitable that he must succeed to the property, they made overtures to his mother, with a view of taking him entirely into their hands, and educating him, if she would give him up to them altogether. This offer was, no doubt, accompanied with the proffer of a substantial inducement, but she, it may be fairly supposed, consulted her spiritual adviser on the point, who counseled a decided rejection of the proposal. At all events, she decidedly refused it.

So matters remained, when a curious act of Parliament was passed, which had a powerful bearing on the circumstances of the case. This was what is known as "The Legitimacy Declaration act." Its passage was mainly due to the persistent energy of a lady, who was anxious to establish the legitimacy of her grandfather, and worked upon certain eminent legislators, morning, noon, and night, until the act was passed, although she was not destined to succeed in her ultimate aim. By the terms of this act, the heir to an estate whose title is, or is likely to be, impugned, can cite all persons interested to come into Court, and show cause why he should not be adjudged heir. Young BOUVERIE determined to do this. Meanwhile, tidings had reached the BOUVERIES that Mrs. FRANK, his mother, had misconducted herself during her married life; that she frequently left her husband for months, and that it was in due time after one of such absences—during which, it was alleged that she had been consorting with a man of color at Liverpool—that her son was born.

The BOUVERIES resolved, therefore, to oppose, on the ground that the young man was not their brother's son. But proof of this position—one almost always of a most difficult kind—was not forthcoming in a degree adequate to the requirements of judge or jury. And, consequently, a young man who has served as a private soldier and officer's servant in the line, and afterward as a member of the Irish Constabulary, now steps into possession of a splendid mansion, with park and gardens on a commensurate scale, and becomes the representative of an aristocratic house in one of the most exclusive and county societies in England, with an income worth at the least a million of dollars. If he is unmarried, there are no doubt Lady Eyres, who will be willing enough to take him by the hand, and generously forgive the absence of blue blood on his mother's side, and the alleged doubtful parentage on the father's. For to mothers with girls to provide for, Delapre Abbey and $50,000 a year are advantages not to be lightly regarded.

A Dock Commissioner's Reception.

Another of the evidences of the lamentable condition of panic into which the Dock Commission have been thrown by our exposure of their inefficiency and connivance with the Ring, has come to our knowledge. Knowing themselves to be in the wrong, and utterly unable to make a defense against our charges worthy of the slightest consideration, they attempted first the task of writing an explanatory letter evasive of the matters actually under discussion. Mr. WOOD undertook the impossible feat of reconciling with honesty and the reputation for respectability of the members of this model Commission, the successive election of his "genial" friends, the two brothers, "Honest HUGHEY" and HENRY A. SMITH, to the office of its treasurer; but he made a sad failure. The public are not yet prepared to accept his new rule that posts of the highest pecuniary responsibility, and requiring peculiar experience and approved character, should be given to men simply because they are either "young" or "younger" than others. Mr. WOOD might better have told the truth plainly—that these men were elected because TWEED so ordered.

It is, of course, true, because he has told us so, that Mr. AGNEW, the President of this model Board, utterly ignored the fact of the salary of ten thousand dollars a year attached to it, when he accepted the office of a Dock Commissioner; and, we suppose, as "genial" observers of humanity, we must conclude that the latest effort of the Commission to justify itself, originated in the remarkable zeal of the members to realize, at some distant day in the future, the system of docks which their Engineer-in-Chief so clearly laid out nearly two years ago; but we confess to a feeling of doubt on the subject. They invited, the other day, all the members elect of the State Legislature from New-York City to visit their sumptuous offices, and inspect the work they had done and were doing. These gentlemen were politely ushered into the presence of Mr. AGNEW, over whose desk appropriately hangs the portrait of "Boss" TWEED, elegantly photographed by BRADY. It looks down blandly, as it should, and smiles benignantly on the eminent tobacconist beneath, and fitly completes the effect of the massive Ingersoll Bureau, at which that disinterested servant of the public sits. After the usual survey of the picture-gallery of the Commissioners in the grand council chamber, and an introduction to the big green table, which already shows signs of the wear incident to the ponderous discussions of which it has been the witness and victim, the forthcoming legislators were conducted to the only real working-place of the Department. It was in the cock-loft of the building, and the way led up devious stairs. There, instead of Tweed portraits and Ingersoll furniture, they encountered rooms adorned only with deal drawing-tables on an uncarpeted floor, and maps plans and surveys, illustrating the details of the dock system their hosts had adopted when they first consented to become Dock Commissioners.

This movement of inviting the City members elect of the Legislature to visit their office, and hear their story of their performances, was plainly intended by the Commissioners to assist them, first, in their desire of retaining office, and second, to whitewash the rather dark record they have made since they assumed charge of the Dock Department. We have little fear, however, that gentlemen so intelligent as most of these legislative visitors were, and so thoroughly committed to reform, will be influenced by such a transparent attempt to cover delinquency in office. We did not hear, let us add, that Mr. WILLIAM WOOD'S "genial" friend, whose absence that voluminous correspondent of ours so tenderly regretted—viz., HENRY A. SMITH, the efficient young Treasurer of the Dock Department—was present at this ingenious reception. If, however, he still chances to be within the confines of civilization, and within reach of a daily newspaper, he will undoubtedly read, with a certain degree of admiration, of this move of his intimates and colleagues, but he undoubtedly would have managed it better than they, for he is an adept at just that sort of thing. The fact is, they have suffered immeasurably from the absence of this SMITH—so much so that we are not surprised that his crony, Mr. WILLIAM WOOD, expressed tender solicitude as to his return. They have bungled sadly in their efforts to cover their follies, for they lack that peculiar ability to manage legislatures and legislators which is characteristic of a direct pupil of TWEED'S. Moreover this SMITH—let us speak a good word for him in his absence—is a clever fellow and really has brains—which is not always the case with even representatives of "unimpeachable integrity and high-toned mercantile honor."

MINOR TOPICS.

One more complaint from the Board of Health, that the streets have not been cleaned last week according to contract! The general public opinion is that during that period they were not cleaned at all. Under the circumstances, it is very comforting to recall the statement made by Mayor HALL, the other day, that BROWN'S contract could not be broken, though his men never lifted a broom. HALL, to be sure, has very elastic ideas as to the obligations of any official contract. He may possibly think it quite as absurd to punish BROWN for taking money he does not earn, as it would be to call himself to account for signing fraudulent bonds as a means of robbing the public. In spite of the natural sympathy between a pair of rascals, we do not despair of seeing justice done to both.

Messrs. "HANK" SMITH and MANSFIELD, Commissioners of Police, are striving to make a little capital for themselves by going to Albany to procure a "Police Dedictory Bill," to restore the $400,000 stolen from the moneys which belong to that body. We trust there will be no such bill passed. The Police are no worse off than the Board of Education, who are some $900,000 behind, or the Board of Charities, who are fully $400,000, or other Departments. Mr. GRANT will undoubtedly present a General Dedictory bill, which will include all these deficits, and then issue long bonds under authority of it.

The Gaulois has a new London correspondent, and no caricature in Punch was ever more absurd than some of the things he says. Possessed originally with the idea that England was on the eve of a democratic revolution, he turns up his eyes and shrugs and grimaces like a true Frenchman over the fact that just now he finds everywhere a sentiment of affectionate loyalty to the reigning family. Of course the next thing to believe is that there was never any republican tendency in England at all. He writes, in truth, "Sir DILKE et HODGSON surent beaucoup à faire avant de changer le cœur de tout ce peuple-là." Sir CHARLES DILKE and Mr. ODGER should feel particularly obliged, and especially the latter, for the implicit compliment to the aspirations of so considerable a body of his supporters.

The peculiar character of French republicanism is pretty well illustrated by the position taken, according to a cable dispatch, by certain Parisian journals in reference to M. VAUTRAIN. That gentleman is the nominee for the position of a member of the Assembly, of a section of the Radicals in the capital. He had the courage to declare, in his address to the electors, that though he believed that the Republic was essential to the salvation of France, yet he would not support the Republic in face of a vote by universal suffrage against it. Thereupon, Radical journals accuse M. VAUTRAIN of treason to his party, and withdraw their support of his candidature. It would be interesting to know how any republican form of government could exist where the majority of the people were opposed to it. To make the people supreme in spite of themselves is somewhat of a contradiction in terms, since the first requisite of such a proceeding is to tell them that they are not supreme at all.

War between Russia and Japan is one of the possibilities of the near future. That the Japanese Government has taken no active steps as yet to resent the seizure of the Island of Sagualien is by no means to be construed as a pacific acceptance of that act by Russia; and the removal of her centre of action in those seas by the latter power from the port of Nikolaievski, at the mouth of the Amoor, to that of Vladivostok, close to the Chinese frontier, and practically in Japanese waters, will, it is thought, bring about a collision. The more we hear of the Japanese, however, the more "knowing" a people they seem to be, and perhaps they have the rare wisdom not to bark before they are ready to bite. When the steam fleet they are building is fairly afloat, that time may, in their judgment, have arrived.

Few monarchs are so condescending as to give their subjects personal accounts of their royal exploits and opinions. In fact, we can recall no other save the Shah of Persia, who, it seems, has adopted this practice, and reveals his wisdom weekly in the only newspaper published in his dominions, the Times of Persia. The following is an extract from one of these communications of the "King of Kings," as he calls himself, and is instructive, as showing the difference between the terse simplicity of the Shah and the more circuitous and diplomatic style of ruler further west:

"I got up very early this morning, and drank my tea, mounted the white horse given me by ——, and took the French gun which is loaded from behind. Several of my princes accompanied me; my army followed. We soon put up an antelope—all fired at it, but did not hit; a great grief to us. I arrived for breakfast. After breaking the third bottle of Schiraz, I turned toward home, fired at it myself, and shot it with such skill that all the army were astonished."

The Republicans of New-Hampshire, yesterday, nominated for Governor Hon. E. A. STRAW, of Manchester, from which town the Democratic candidate, Gov. WESTON, was also chosen. Mr. STRAW is a popular man, and the Press of the State is confident of his election. Senator WILSON, of Massachusetts, addressed the Convention in a strong speech indorsing the Administration.

According to the Miners' Journal, Committees of the Anthracite Board of Trade and Workmen's Benevolent Association have agreed to submit to the coal miners the same terms as were offered in May last, viz.: The fixing of wages on the basis of $2 75 per ton for coal. This is to be the rule during ten months of the year, during the other two a basis of $2 25 has been adopted. This arrangement is likely to be perfectly satisfactory to the men. The only difficulty will be with the operators, or colliery lessees, who may find it impossible to pay wages at an assumed price for coal of $2 75, when it is probable that they will actually receive prices varying from $2 25 to $2 50. Diminished tolls may, however, help out the operators, and these are, it is said, likely to be forthcoming. At present, therefore, the public may safely expect that the inevitably low price of coal during this Winter will not be interfered with by another triangular war between the railroads, the operators, and the workmen.

The Charges Against Harbor-Master Hart.

The investigation into the charges against Harbor-Master HART was to have been resumed yesterday. The defendant and his counsel appeared before the Captain of the Port, but the merchants who had preferred the charges were absent. Mr. BENEDICT, counsel for the prosecutors, moved that the investigation be postponed, which was strongly objected to by Mr. DAVIS, the defendant's counsel. A rather heated discussion ensued, and finally Mr. JONES decided that the investigation should be postponed until 10½ A. M. today.

Transfer of Erie Stock to English Stockholders.

In the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, Judge BLATCHFORD issued an order directing JAMES H. COLEMAN to deliver on next Saturday 12,735 shares of Erie stock, which he holds as receiver, into the possession of HENRY SWAN, Attorney of HEATH and RAPHAEL, the English claimants. He also ordered the Erie Company to appear on Saturday with their transfer-books, before Commissioner WHITE, Master in Equity, in order that the transfer can be made.

Pneumatic Tubes.

At the meeting, last evening, of the New-York Society of Practical Engineering, JAMES A. WHITNEY described at length the several systems of pneumatic-car propulsion.

Dr. GILBERT advocated a double line of elevated pneumatic tubes, with stations a mile apart. HAMILTON E. TOWLE showed how the cars may be readily stopped and started by means of slight inclined planes at the stations, and J. E. FISHER explained a method of heating air by gas in cars having engines supplied from pneumatic tubes, in order to prevent freezing from the absorption of heat by the expansion of the air in driving the engines.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Proceedings of the Republican State Convention Yesterday.

Harmonious Action and Enthusiastic Proceedings—Nomination of Ezekiel A. Straw for Governor—Adoption of a Sound Platform.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 3.—The Republican State Convention, the last of the nominating conventions of this campaign in New-Hampshire, met here today, and made up the ticket to be elected in the next March, with the old-fashioned enthusiasm. Hon. B. H. BOUTON, the Chairman of the State Committee, called the Convention to order, and after reading the formal call made a speech, in which he talked with most refreshing plainness of the situation and the duty of the hour. Among other things he said:

You have assembled as representatives of the Republican Party under very extraordinary circumstances. We have a Democratic Governor. Our action today will, I am confident, be as satisfactory to, our party and the people that Gov. WARNER will be the last of his tribe. We beat the enemy in twenty successive well-contested campaigns, but at the last election he achieved a partial success—this not on account of any retard which the people have for modern Democracy and its cognomen during the war, or from too Copperhead principles, but rather by reason of local troubles, dissatisfaction and unusual apathy in our ranks. We were, in fact, beaten by ourselves. One experiment of this kind is sufficient. The people have had enough of Democratic rule, enough of Tammany, enough of Ketchum, for two decades at least. The experience of the past year has taught us a lesson which we shall not speedily forget. We now know that there must be harmony in our ranks, life and activity in our organization, vigor and discretion in our actions, and wisdom in our councils, to render success certain. I have given much attention to political affairs since the last election, and know that I utter but the truth when I say that the Republicans have determined in compact, irresistible columns to "move upon the works of the enemy" and redeem the State. We have not forgotten the more than 20,000 total votes which we gave for the Republican candidates in 1872. We can, if we so resolve, repeat that memorable campaign of sixteen successive years. * * * * * * *

In looking over the history of the party for the whole of those sixteen years there is little to regret, and much, very much, for which we may reasonably be proud. Now, gentlemen, I congratulate you most heartily, not only on account of our history and the brilliant prospect before us, but also in view of the fact that we have a national Administration worthy of public confidence and ardent support. President GRANT and his Administration is fast rearing to itself a memorable record. It will not suffer in comparison with any of its predecessors. Great wisdom is displayed in the management of foreign affairs, while prudence, energy and reform are the characteristic features of its domestic policy. The Treaty of Washington proved my first and prophetic declaration, the rapidity with which our national debt, expenditures and taxes have been reduced affords most conclusive evidence of the latter. While some newspapers and a few orators of the country have been engaged in learnedly discussing the question of civil service reform, the President has quietly and unconditionally issued the proclamation, practically establishing it, thus leading the way for Congress, and entrenching himself more firmly than ever in the hearts of the American people.

Hon. JACOB BENTON, of Lancaster, was made permanent presiding officer, and the honorary title of "Vice-President" was given to the leaders present from the different counties of the State. Mr. BENTON, in his address to take the chair, thus alluded to the possibility of President GRANT's renomination:

"I regard the Administration of President GRANT as one of the most upright, patriotic and successful the country has ever had. I do not concede the correctness of the rumor for another term as a foregone conclusion; but if he should be renominated it would be because the people wanted his renomination. For myself I think such is likely to be the case. I do not believe that there is a Republican within the sound of my voice, or I might say, within the State of New-Hampshire, who is not ready to support so honorable and noble a President as Gen. GRANT is proving himself to be. [Prolonged applause.]

After the appointment of committees and some desultory talk, the Convention proceeded to a ballot for a candidate for Governor. The result was as follows: Whole number of votes, 359; necessary for a choice, 180: A. S. TWITCHELL, of Gorham, had 1; D. W. BUCKMINSTER, of Keene, 1; DEXTER RICHARDS, of Newport, 1; ASA FOWLER, of Concord, 1; E. L. GODDARD, of Claremont, 4; S. W. HALLE, of Keene, 30; WM. C. PATTEN, of Kingston, 1; Hon. HORTON D. WALKER, of Portsmouth, 23; Hon. E. A. STRAW, of Manchester, 294. The announcement was received with cheers and intense enthusiasm. The nomination was made unanimous, and Judge CROSS, in behalf of Manchester, thanked the Convention for its action. A ballot for candidate for Railroad Commissioner was then taken, resulting in the nomination of ALBERT S. TWITCHELL, of Gorham.

The platform was next reported by Hon. ASA FOWLER, of Concord, the Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, as follows:

Resolved, That the Republican Party is still, as it ever has been, the party of freedom, improvement, retrenchment and reform; that having during its most powerful career vindicated and firmly established the right of every man to his own limbs, sinews and earnings, the equality of all men before the law, the inability of a State to endanger any portion of the people, and the duty of the United Nation to every citizen the equal enjoyment of his liberty and rights until he forfeits them by crime. Its mission henceforth is one of peaceful but active progress, to protect the weak and helpless victims of fate, oppression, or accident; to extend the benefactions and diffuse the blessings of civilization; to promote universal education and the general diffusion of intelligence; to see that laws are faithfully executed and justice impartially administered; to stimulate ingenuity in the discovery of new inventions for economizing labor, and thus increasing the production of the daily real income of individuals and national wealth; to foster agriculture as well as manufactures, mining and the mechanic arts, thus by bringing nearer together the producers of food and of fabrics, and furnishing both with the same market, that enhancing the profits of industry and the wages of labor by reducing the cost of transportation and diminishing the expense of exchange between the farmers and the citizens; to reduce the burdens of taxation by economy, even to the lowest pons consistent with the maintenance of the national credit, abolish all unnecessary offices, rebuke venality and expose and punish corruption and robbery; to wrest from the hands of unfaithful public politicians by trade and cluster in these most worthy and best qualified to wield it, by electing and appointing to office only honest and faithful men to administer every department of the government with the most rigid economy and the strictest fidelity, that the burdens may bear as lightly and its benefits be as generally diffused as possible; to secure to all the free and brighter future for the toiling masses, and contribute to the welfare, enlightenment and happiness of the whole people.

Resolved, That the success of the present national Administration in reducing the public debt, diminishing and equalizing taxation, administering every branch of public affairs with economy and efficiency, forming and improving the civil service, enforcing the laws without fear or favor, protecting the nation's wards with paternal care against the cruel avarice of speculation and fraud, and maintaining friendly relations with foreign Powers has been such as to challenge and the approbation of the great majority of the American people, and justly entitle it to the confidence and commendation of every true Republican.

Resolved, That while not anything to let the dead past bury its dead, we cannot forget, and the American people can never forget, that for the sixteen Democratic Party and its leaders South and North were engaged in a causeless and unjustifiable rebellion, and the burden of debt now resting upon the industry of our state and the nation.

Resolved, That so long as a single soldier disabled in the late war for the Union shall need a dollar, so long as one dollar of the national debt remains, the prosecution of that war remains unpaid, so long as living hands do not cease to garland with flowers the graves of our fallen heroes, so long as one of those by and their country's so long should not the Government of that country be entrusted to the control of those who sought or would have paralyzed its arm strength.

Resolved, That the Republican Party, while many proud of its past history, is not sanctified by it, but the greatest, or its obligations to the future. In its mission, therefore, and true to the people of New-Hampshire, we inscribe on our banner, economy, retrenchment and reform—economy in the public service, economy in the public expenditures, retrenchment of all unnecessary, and reform, moral, social and political, everywhere.

Resolved, That one of the primary objects of civil growth and being the protection of property, the growth of the country should mean its diminution of the expense of the government, and all taxation be so just must be equal.

Resolved, That we call upon Congress to abolish the franking privilege; give the people the free use of the public lands except as free homesteads to actual settlers; reduce the expenses of the army and navy; abolish the twelve thousand officers of the present army, paying their place, and everywhere its incumbrances, and promote universal education.

That the Democratic Party, in the course of its brief and sectional control of our State Government, by its unnecessary and vexatious interference with the rights of the people, and the duty of the United Nation to every citizen the equal enjoyment of his liberty and rights until he forfeits them by crime, its mission henceforth is one of peaceful but active progress, to protect the weak and helpless victims of fate, oppression, or accident; to extend the benefactions and diffuse the blessings of civilization; to promote universal education and the general diffusion of intelligence; to see that laws are faithfully executed and justice impartially administered; to stimulate ingenuity in the discovery of new inventions for economizing labor, and thus increasing the production of the daily real income of individuals and national wealth; to foster agriculture as well as manufactures, mining and the mechanic arts, thus by bringing nearer together the producers of food and of fabrics, and furnishing both with the same market, that enhancing the profits of industry and the wages of labor by reducing the cost of transportation and diminishing the expense of exchange between the farmers and the citizens; to reduce the burdens of taxation by economy, even to the lowest pons consistent with the maintenance of the national credit, abolish all unnecessary offices, rebuke venality and expose and punish corruption and robbery; to wrest from the hands of unfaithful public politicians by trade and cluster in these most worthy and best qualified to wield it, by electing and appointing to office only honest and faithful men to administer every department of the government with the most rigid economy and the strictest fidelity, that the burdens may bear as lightly and its benefits be as generally diffused as possible; to secure to all the free and brighter future for the toiling masses, and contribute to the welfare, enlightenment and happiness of the whole people.

CITY AFFAIRS.

Present Aspect of the Reform Movement.

The Question with Regard to Tweed's Bail.

Matters at the City Hall—The Savings Bank—Bills and the English Stockholders—Police Reports—Coroners' Cases.

The Ring's Prospect.

The Ring, as a great organized system, though not as such as the "Babes' Progress," is worth the less now. The Ring, of course, cannot be given from a short respite, enabling investors, his sureties and other users, Gov. of Tweed's swindling receipts of income enough the Sheriff's hammer today—the New-York Printing Company—and it is to be hoped that, in his present nervous condition, every "Knock-down" may go straight home to him. So complex has been the Tammany clock-work, of a wheel within a wheel, that the failure of one of their banks topples over their pet printing office. Well, honest men will have an opportunity of making a cheap bargain; though that is a poor consolation to the tax-payers who pay for the costly type and machinery.

A far more important matter to Mr. TWEED is the question of his bail. Mr. PECKHAM was sent in his opposition to RICHARD M. TWEED's justification of his bond, at the hearing before Judge CARDOZO yesterday. The gist of Mr. PECKHAM's argument is exclusive to the learned mind. It was: A prisoner's sleepings cannot and should not be accepted as part of his bail; and that the property of RICHARD M. TWEED, so magnanimously gives to him by his father, since his father's arrest, with a view to furnishing his father's bail, was but a small portion of the $6,000,000 which his father has stolen from the tax-payers of New-York. Should RICHARD M. TWEED be allowed to justify, any sneak-thief who steals a $100 watch, or a dozen or two spoons or forks, has only to place them on Judge DOWLING's desk when he is brought up at the Tombs Police Court, and walk off scot-free, to perpetrate other robberies and burglaries. Judge CARDOZO, while rather shadowing forth that he will accept RICHARD M. TWEED's bond, intimated that he would require the recording of the deeds of the transfer of the property. Will this, however, prevent Young TWEED from selling or mortgaging the property, and handing over the proceeds to his outrageously generous parent?

Justice COULTER's case, before Judge BRADY, improves with the telling. It is as perfect a picture of Tammany recklessness on a small scale (compared with their more gigantic frauds) as the most spiteful artist could desire to paint. W. J. BELL, one of the poll clerks in the Twelfth District of the Nineteenth Ward, swore, yesterday, that he made out two of the three election returns, and that of those formally acted upon, and on which COULTER was fraudulently counted into the Justiceship of the Seventh District, no person was in his handwriting. JAMES W. CLARK, a canvasser, also swore that the returns produced, purporting to have been written by him, were not in his handwriting. Was ever a Justice so shallow! He will doubtless, however, soon be altogether out of his depth in a seven-foot by four-feet cell in Sing Sing.

The rest of the Ring are doing as well as can be expected—SWEENY, trying to gather his shattered nerves together in the bracing oxygen of St. Catharines; CONNOLLY a little threatened with a relapse after the stimulating reunion with his family on New-Year's Day; and HALL cracking his jokes with reckless profusion, like a castaway when he thinks he will taste just one last good meal over his two or three days' remaining provisions, before he quietly surrenders himself to his inevitable doom.

The New-York Printing Company—To the Sheriff Today—Who McMullin & Co. Are.

As was announced exclusively in the TIMES of the 26th of December, the property of the New-York Printing Company will be sold tomorrow, by the Sheriff, at public auction. The notice of the proposed sale, which has been also published in the TIMES, is as follows:

By virtue of a certain writ of execution to me directed and delivered, I will expose for sale at public vendue, on Friday, the 5th day of January, 1872, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the rooms, Centre-street, from thence to No. 38 Centre-street, the Type Foundry, corner of Franklin and Centre streets, the Stereotype Foundry, Franklin-street, all the property of the New-York Printing Company, consisting of a large and general assortment of machinery, Hoe's lithographic plates and presses, steam-engines and boilers, machinery, safes, desks, counters, furniture, &c.

MATTHEW T. BRENNAN, Sheriff.
W. H. BURNS, Deputy Sheriff.

It will be remembered that the sale of the Company's effects is ordered in satisfaction of a suit brought against it by the receiver of the Ocean Bank for the recovery of a note of $109,289 67.

No satisfactory compromise having been offered, the sale will take place publicly, and not privately, as has been industriously reported by those interested in the defunct concern. There are two other establishments belonging to the Company, one at No. 13 Vandewater-street, and the other on the corner of St. Mark's-place and Avenue C. These will not be sold at present, though they are held by the Sheriff in case the sale of tomorrow fails to satisfy the claims against the Company. In the latter event the property will be handed over to the parties bringing the action, after they have given bonds to the Sheriff to the amount of the judgment still unsatisfied.

A large number of persons in the printing and lithographic business, having received information of the sale through the TIMES article, have arrived in this City from Chicago with the intention of attending the sale. Deputy Sheriff Burns has been besieged by persons wishing to buy stock and material, and it is supposed that the sale will be largely attended.

The various establishments of the Company are the buildings Nos. 81, 83 and 85 Centre-street; corner of St. Mark's-place and Avenue A; No. 13 East Twelfth-street, once occupied by THOW & CO., the publishers of the New-York City Directory; Stuyvesant-place, near Third-avenue; and No. 38 Centre-street, owned by TWEED. M. TWEED, so kindly given to him by his father for a paltry consideration. This last-mentioned building is a five-story iron front, and is given as security for $300,000 in the justification of WILLIAM M. TWEED's bail. Mr. TWEED, Sr.'s private office is facing the street, and here he is in the habit of seeking retirement when pursued by political friends and Sheriff's officers. Between 2,500 and 3,000 persons have been employed by the Company, and are now thrown out of work.

Though a Sheriff's sale for so small a sum, comparatively, would seem to show that the Company was ruined, financially, it is said, that the COMSTOCK and WILBOUR have taken care of themselves by large investments in real estate in New-York City and in Westchester County. TWEED and SWEENY are understood to be the largest stockholders with COMSTOCK and WILBOUR. The leases of the buildings—some of which have a long time to run—are to be sold if found necessary by the Sheriff, and they, together with the Company's property, if it should, will cover the amount of money required by the suit, together with the costs. An interesting point in connection with this forced sale of the late FRANK MCMULLIN & CO. who were to have been appointed Corporation printers by one of the last resolutions of the old Board of Aldermen, are supposed to be identical with the concern to be sold to-morrow. Mr. MCMULLIN is found, upon inquiry, to be an efficient clerk of the Company, who, from his experience and ability has been intrusted with the management of the affairs for some time past.

"Boss" Tweed's Bail—Motion Before Judge Cardozo to Approve the Sureties—Decision Reserved.

Pursuant to adjournment, the motion on behalf of WILLIAM M. TWEED to approve his bondsmen, whose examination has already been published in the TIMES, again came before Judge CARDOZO yesterday. There being no room vacant, owing to all the other Courts being in session, the motion was heard in the Judges' room.

Mr. PECKHAM appeared in opposition, and contended that the bond showed that prior to August, 1871, when the title to the Ostic property was conveyed to Bondsman M. TWEED, he had no real estate or other property worth mentioning; that more than a month previous to that conveyance, and also the conveyance of the Fifth-avenue property, a payment was made to recover $5,000,000 stolen from the City, brought to the knowledge of RICHARD M. TWEED, and those conveyances, as well as all subsequent conveyances of property to which he now assumes up his justification, were received with a full knowledge of the existence of the claims of the City. The deeds to the Ostic and Fifth-avenue property had been duly recorded, but subsequently the conveyances were lodged with the deeds for the remainder of the property, which Mr. M. have never been put on record. No consideration had been paid for any of the property; no general division of the family estate had been made; this son had been the sole recipient of his father's munificent generosity, and the whole circumstances shows that it was a mere family arrangement to put property into the hands of RICHARD M. TWEED, that he might become bail for his father, the defendant. Such bail is not what the statute requires. It is clear that the money paid for the property at the bidding of his father; and, moreover, this bond is sought to be enforced—the bail—in case any to the son: "Bill out that property and give me the proceeds," and having received it, to invalidate Mr. DEVLIN as an acceptable surety.

Mr. FIELD stated in favor of the motion to approve, that the whole amount sworn to by the bondsmen was over two millions and a half, leaving certainly a sufficient margin to overbalance the only contingent bonds, even if Mr. DEVLIN was legally liable on them. Mr. BURNELL, he said, was to have prepared an accurate statement of the figures to be submitted to the Court, but he was detained away by illness. The object of justification of sureties is to satisfy the conscience of the Court, and it would be a burdensome and impracticable proceeding for the Court to try the liability of the bondsmen's property on a proceeding of this character. There never is such law, and never has. In England the law is that the attempt to go into a man's private affairs on an examination of this kind will be not permitted. All that can be done going to satisfy the Court, on the oaths of the bondsmen, that they are worth the amount called for, and that there is reasonable assurance that the body of the defendant will be produced in response to the judgment of the Court. The intention of our Code of Procedure, which supersedes all previous provisions on the subject of civil bail, is that each of the bondsmen shall be a resident, and freeholder, and each worth the amount called for in the bond over and above all his just claims and liabilities. That is all, and if they can say they are worth that amount, that should be satisfactory. If a bondsman must be worth the amount, over and above every liability, contingent or fixed, it would not be possible to get bail. Take the largest shipping owner in the City, Mr. LOAVE for instance. He is produced as a bondsman in a civil case, and swears he is worth so much over and above all liability. But, says the opposing counsel, he may owe you tell Mr. LOAVE, but that a week or more ago one of your ships was down an East Indiaman in the China seas, and has involved you in liability far exceeding what you have sworn yourself to be worth?" Such an objection would be clearly untenable, and not competent or qualified liability can disqualify a bondsman. It must be a liability fixed and legal, creating such a reduction in the amount of the property as will entitle the party to a reduction of his taxes or assessments. Does Mr. DEVLIN say: "You can't tax me on so much property, because there are bonds held by the City, on which I may be liable at some future time?" Why, such a proposition would be laughed at. Moreover, it appears nearly all the work for which these bonds were given has been completed, accepted by the City, and the money paid over. If it should be discovered at any future time that Mr. TWEED HAS had bribed the Inspectors to accept imperfect work, he would be liable to suspend to the City for damages, but such liability could not be taken into account in estimating his present amount of property. Again, they say Mr. RICHARD M. TWEED can't be bail because he got his property from his father as a gift. Has he not his father's property? Has he not the right at this moment to dispose of it absolutely, and at his pleasure? Years ago, JOHN JACOB ASTOR made a present of the ASTOR House to his son WILLIAM for a consideration of $1, and would it be seriously contended that the latter did not own it, or that he could not become bail, with that property as a basis? Certainly not; and this objection, he apprehended, would not be considered for a moment by the Court, in this case.

Judge CARDOZO suggested that if the property conveyed in November was to be considered as a basis for security, Mr. TWEED as bail, he thought the deeds ought to be put on record.

Mr. FIELD replied that he knew of no objection to putting the deeds on record, although in England it was a rare thing to pay deeds on record. In the richest and wisest of England don't record their deeds, and you go no one ever thinks of questioning their title. Mr. TWEED would, nevertheless, record his deeds in conformity with the suggestion of the Court.

Judge CARDOZO requested to be furnished with a copy of the bond, so that he might consider it in connection with the motion to approve bail.

The matter was then submitted to the Judge, with the understanding that Mr. BURNELL, the bondsman of Mr. TWEED, and Mr. PECKHAM opposed, be at liberty to hand in additional points in writing.

Mr. JOSEPH J. MARRIN appeared at this point, to make the statement that the motion pending to set aside DEVLIN's judgment against the City, the fact of which was placed upon the record by Mr. PECKHAM, did not amount to two cents.

Mr. FIELD—Which don't amount to two cents—the motion to set aside the judgment or the judgment itself?

Mr. MARRIN—The motion to set the judgment aside.

This closed the discussion, the Judge reserving his decision.

Wanted Bail—Not at Tweed.

WM. M. TWEED (filled (away ab) bail he could the greater part of yesterday in his private office, No. 52 Duane-street. He was visited by some intimate friends but denied himself to all who did not come within that category. A TIMES reporter who called failed to obtain an interview. It is understood that Mr. TWEED's friends are of the opinion that the "Boss" will not attempt to take his seat as Senator until the way is made perfectly clear for him. At present the justification of his bail bond stands in the way. He is still in the custody of the Sheriff of the City and County of New-York, and cannot go to Albany without his permission, until his son RICHARD and Bondsman have successfully passed through the examining fire of Mr. CARDOZO, and are fully proved to be honestly worth the amount for which they seek to justify. He is also, it is said, uncertain of the reception which will be accorded to him at the Legislature, and waits for the result of the experiment now being made by TOM FIELDS.

Mr. TWEED was at his house on Fifth-avenue, yesterday evening, but it was confidently stated at the Metropolitan Hotel last night that he would start for Albany today. This may depend on the justification of the signatories to his bail bond.

The Yorkville Police Justiceship—Further Testimony Yesterday—The Weaving of the Web Going On.

The trial of the case of MURRAY against COULTER, involving the right to the Yorkville Police Justiceship, was continued before Judge BRADY and a jury in Supreme Court, Trial Term, Part II., yesterday.

JOHN A. KENNEDY, Ex-Police Superintendent, was examined, and confirmed the testimony already published as to the returns from the disputed voting been called of to representatives of the Police Head-quarters on the night of the election. Both MURRAY and COULTER, he said, were formerly members of the Police Department; MURRAY left the department in 1863, having deserted during the riots. On cross examination, he stated that during the riots MURRAY, with some fifty others, refused to do duty, and Capt. WALLING accepted his resignation.

W. J. BELL, poll clerk of the Twelfth District of the Nineteenth Ward, testified that he saw HARRISON and RICHARDS, the canvassers, sign the returns as made out, yes by himself and one by RIMON, the other poll clerk, and that he gave notice of the new returns of the District as in his handwriting.

FRANKLIN STACOM, inspector of the Eighth District of the Nineteenth Ward, testified to having kept a tally of the Police Justice, which gave 24 votes to COULTER, 17 for MURRAY and 16 for MATTESON.

W. H. WRIGHT, poll clerk of the same District, could not swear that the filling up of the returns was in his handwriting.

JAMES CLARK testified that he obtained from JOSEPH KELLY, poll clerk in the Twenty-eighth District, Nineteenth Ward, a memorandum of the votes for Police Justice, showing forty-six votes for MURRAY, and seventy-six for COULTER.

JOSEPH KELLY could not swear that the said writing on the last-named returns was his.

JAMES W. CLARK, a canvasser in the same district, signed the returns, but these produced were not in his handwriting.

Adjourned until today.

The Old and New Boards at the Common Council.

Mr. SHAFFER, the Clerk pro tem. of the Board of Aldermen, and Mr. DEMPSEY, Clerk of the Board of Assistant Aldermen, have nominal possession of their respective offices, but at the same time Messrs. HARDY and MOLONEY, the gentlemen who helped Judge CARDOZO to burn the election returns,) Clerks of the old Boards, retain possession of the books and papers. Mr. HARDY has carried away all his private documents, and the public documents remain locked up. No official work of any kind is allowed to be performed by the Clerks of the old Boards, and even the finishing up of their uncompleted business. The Clerk of the Board of Assistant Aldermen was absent yesterday, and not a single member of either of the old Boards showed himself in the City Hall. Padlocks have been placed on the doors of the City Library, the Common Council Chambers, and the adjoining offices. The clerks' offices, by order of Mr. VAN NORT, the new Commissioner of Public Works. It is understood that further steps are expected at the meeting today, but as the new Boards have possession, and are backed by all the City authorities, it is difficult to see what trouble can arise. It is also stated that an understanding exists as to the election of a President of the new Board of Aldermen, and that the choice will fall on Gen. COCHRANE. The other Board has not yet settled its differences, but it is believed that at the meeting today Mr. LITTLEFIELD will be nominated, and then elected. The Commission on Protests of the new Board of Aldermen, seem to have met at 11 A. M. yesterday, but they did not get together.

The Mayor's Office.

The Mayor was at his office quite early yesterday, and had a long interview with Gen. COCHRANE. The Mayor stated that he had at last been served with a copy of the resolutions adopted by the Common Council in regard to his impeachment. These resolutions, he said, merely directed that measures should be taken to impeach him, but he had not yet heard that he had been impeached, and, consequently, in his opinion of the case, could not properly be considered as having any effect. The old Boards of the Common Council, he thought, would be compelled to accept the situation just as it stands. The only resource they have at law is a bill in equity, and even that cannot be issued without the consent of the Attorney-General, who of course will withhold it, even should it be asked for. He did not, he said, apprehend any further trouble. The new Boards of the Common Council had been legally appointed, had taken their seats, and he could see no ground for further difficulties could arise.

The Engineer's Office—Condition of the Sinking—Reforms Proposed by Gen. Sigel.

Gen. SIGEL has made no further appointments than those already reported in the TIMES. He denies, emphatically, the report published in an evening paper, that he had dismissed all the examining clerks except three. Two junior clerks only have been removed. The General, however, intends to reduce the force of copyists and other employes in the office, so that those remaining may be enabled to earn fair living salaries. The applications of all aspirants to office will be submitted to a Board composed of some of the office clerks, who will decide on their fitness and report to Gen. SIGEL. An investigation will soon be commenced into the charges of extortion made by persons who have had business with the office, and the results given to the public. Gen. SIGEL complained that when he came down on Monday he found the building in a very disorderly condition. No fires were lighted, the windows were broken, and the holes filled with books, newspapers and all sorts of rubbish. The private office is about six feet square, and very dark; it has no carpets or curtains, and the furniture comprises a desk and one chair, compelling the General to stand while his private secretary writes. Orders have been given to clear out the upper story and remove the rubbish elsewhere, and when this has been done, the apartment, which is light and roomy, will be made his office. These changes will be made at the private expense of the Engineer.

Gen. SIGEL stated yesterday that, in his appointments, he will be controlled by no political influence whatever, but will rely entirely on his own judgment.

Department of Public Works—Removal of Sinecure Employes.

On Tuesday, Mr. VAN NORT, in company with Chief Engineer TRACY, visited the High Bridge, the High Service Works, and the old aqueduct in Ninety-second-street, which is being removed, as directed by law. The High Service Works will be completed within a month, and then every portion of the upper part of the City will be supplied with water, which is not the case at present. The tower of the works is twenty feet taller in height above the level of tide-water. The removal of the old aqueduct which is being replaced by pipes running under ground, is progressing, and also the laying of small pipes in Eighty-second-street and other portions of the upper section of the City, so that the speed requisite in regard to the number of men employed on these works and none was made. Thirty men, borrowed, were removed from the Department on Tuesday, and sixty yesterday. They were chiefly water policemen, inspectors, axmen, and foremen. As the salaries averaged $1,000 each, an aggregate saving will be effected of about $60,000 per annum. Other removals will be made in a few days.

The men discharged during the past two days were as follows:

	Salaries.
Sixty water policemen	$1,000 00
Six General Superintendents of Sewers	1,000 00
Nine rod-men	1,500 00
Two axmen, (per day)	2 50
One foreman, (per day)	4 00

A New Commissioner of Docks.

Mr. HENRY A. SMITH has resigned his position as a member of the Board of Docks, and Mr. JOHN GRENVILLE KANE, Secretary of the Board, was, yesterday, offered the position, and at once accepted it. Mr. KANE belongs to the Democratic Party.

Important Meeting of the Bar Association Tonight.

A special meeting of the Bar Association has been called for this evening on the request of certain members, for the purpose of receiving and acting on the report of their Judiciary Committee as to the existence of abuses and corruption in the administration of justice in New-York City. A resolution was passed at a recent meeting of the Association, directing this Committee to investigate these matters, and to ascertain if the current charges of corruption and misconduct had a foundation in fact, and could be established by trustworthy evidence. The Committee are now to report, and it is anticipated that immediate and vigorous action will be taken to punish such of the Judges in this City as have been guilty of corrupt practices. The action of the Bar Association will be looked for by the public with intense interest. Hope but lawyers and know or collect the evidence against these men, and none but lawyers can bring them to justice. If the Bench is to continue the practices prevailing for the last few years without some punishment, the work of reform is unfinished and lost. It is to be hoped that there will be a full attendance of the members of the Association, and that its action will be prompt, and of the right kind.

A Slight Mistake of $75,000—New Warrants Are Signed in Brooklyn.

An error occurred in the office of Controller P. A. SCHUYLER yesterday, which, had it not been for the vigilance of Mr. ALBERT H. ANGELL, the Mayor's clerk, might have resulted in serious loss to the new Controller at the very outset of his term. It appears that Mr. B. McCREA, of the Kings County Savings Bank, called at the Controller's office to collect the interest on some assessment bonds held by his bank. The clerk drew a warrant for the interest and principal, amounting to about $111,000, instead of for the amount of the interest only. The warrant was handed to the Controller and signed by him and then taken to the Mayor, who also signed it. The document was then handed to Mr. ANGELL to be recorded, when he remarked that it was for an extraordinarily large amount, and having made some inquiries learned that it was for interest only, and on going to the Controller's office the error was pointed out and rectified, greatly to the relief of Mr. SCHUYLER.

In the Preferred Stock of Erie.

As already noticed in the TIMES, a suit has been some time pending between Mr. THOMPSON, a prominent stockholder of Erie, and the Company, to compel the latter to pay over dividends on the amount of his stock. The case now comes before the Court on a motion on behalf of plaintiff, to compel the Company to produce its books, with a view to obtaining certain information as to the earnings of the Company, the declaration of dividends, &c. Defendants offered to furnish all the information which could properly be required by plaintiff in the prosecution of this suit, but refused to produce the books for general inspection. The Court held the offer to be sufficient, and refused the order.

The Graham's New Year.

Owing to the accident at the Manhattan Gas Works having deprived the Orphan Asylum on Seventy-third-street and Boulevard of light for several nights, the customary Christmas celebration was postponed until New Year, but it was impossible to hold it until Tuesday last, when 160 children sat down to a beautiful dinner of turkey, beef, pies and fruit, which was liberally provided by the lady directors of the asylum. After dinner the children were amused with games of various kinds, and their little hearts were gladdened by the receipt of a dozen of handsome toys, the gift of the Superintendent, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. PELL. The day passed off very pleasantly to all.

The Howling Green Bank—Paying Small Depositors.

Yesterday, for the first time since its failure over two months ago, the Howling-green Savings Bank showed faint signs of returning to its creditors the amounts which it had received from them as deposits. The hopeful indications consisted of the distribution of money to the smaller depositors. Whoever claims are under $21. There are about 400 of this class, and the bank has paid out $1,000 to date; their claims is about $2,000. This sum has been contributed by some of the officers of the bank, who have acted in the matter for the purpose of helping to relieve the wants of the poorer classes of the depositors, many of whom are out of employment and nearly destitute. There was about $500 given out yesterday afternoon, the payments being under the supervision of Judge HOGAN. Fully one-half of the persons who presented themselves at the bank with their pass-books were young children, to whom was owing sums ranging from a few cents to $1 and so. A good many men and women whose deposits amounted to upward of $11 were deeply disappointed on being informed that they would have to wait some time longer before they could get their money.
